Lancaster DHIA Members Receive Transfer Release Forms

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—Officials of the Red Rose DHIA in Lancaster began to circulate individual release forms to all their members early this week. These forms give each local member the opportunity to show support for the position of the Red Rose Directors and request their individual cow and herd records to be released from Pennsylvania DHIA to the processing center at Raleigh, North Carolina.

To reach the more than 1,100 Lancaster members, the eighteen supervisors were given the forms to deliver to their farmers. According to Red Rose President Robert Wenger, this method was used because by mail the farmers may not read it for some time over the spring field work season, and no one would be able to keep records of who wanted to do what. Because the supervisors will deliver the release forms as they make their circuit, the total results of the project will not be known for about a month.

The effort to get individual release forms for each Lancaster DHIA member is the next step in the ongoing discussion between Lancaster Red Rose and Pennsylvania DHIA over the request to transfer records from Pennsylvania to Raleigh.

"We want to remain tied to Pennsylvania, and we are not breaking up Pennsylvania by doing this," Wenger said. "Because Lancaster County is unique with a number of situations that are totally different from the rest of the state, we need to provide some services for our members from out of state that are not being provided here."

Wenger said the major need was for laptop computers used on the farm to provide same-day information for AM/PM program users and members with large herds. In addition, the increased same-day on-the-farm information would help the local association be competitive with the private businesses that provide owner sampler milk testing services in the county.

In spring the farmers' thoughts turn to plowing. In Lancaster County some of the energy used to plow can literally be called "horse power." With only 12.9 total inches of snow in the county this year, the Amish farmers have had an open winter to get a head start on field work. Pennsylvania Farmers Association Holds PAC Fund Raiser

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — One hundred-fifty farmers, legislators, lobbyists and other politically active, agriculturally directed people attended a fund raising dinner Wednesday at the Hershey Country Club to benefit the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) political action committee.

The PFA political action committee (PAC) is FARMER. FARMER is an acronym for "Farmers Allied for Responsive More Effective Representation."

The funds are used to help reelect politicians viewed as supporting or representing PFA goals and policies and for furthering other legislative goals.

The exact amount raised was not yet calculated by presstime. Tickets were $125 per person, or $175 per couple.

The keynote speaker was Gary Blumenthal, deputy assistant to the President of the United States for Cabinet Liason and special assistant for Agricultural Trade and Food Assistance.

Also during the evening, prior to dinner, a farewell reception was held for Richard Newpher, PFA administrative secretary who is to be the new executive director of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the parent organization to PFA, based in Washington, D.C.

Blumenthal has served as chief of staff and executive assistant to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, and from 1983 to 1989, he served

Jerseys Are Tops, Says New State Queen

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

SHARTLESVILLE (Berks Co.) — Jerseys are the cows of the future, proclaims the new state Jersey Queen.

Marsha Ann Chess, a junior at Stoneboro Weslyan School in Mercer County, was crowned queen at the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club annual meeting last week at Haag's Hotel in Shartlesville, Berks County.

She suceeds Melanie Dietrich of Newburg.

One of five candidates for the title, Chess presented a monologue as though she was talking on the phone to a little boy about the advantages of Jerseys.

Her presentation captured the judges' attention.

"We liked her presentation and she had a good interview," said Connie Troutman of Mohrsville. Troutman, Mike Firestine of Womelsdorf, and Patricia Stroup of Greencastle were the judges.

The alternate Jersey queens are Noel Scheib, a student at Eastern College, St. Davids, and Shannon Peterman, a sophomore ag economics major at The Pennsylvania State University.

Chess, who owns 41 Jerseys,

Despite Mounting Pressures, Delaware Century Farm Perseveres

ANDY ANDREWS

MIDDLETOWN, Del. — Hill Island Farm has weathered a lot of storms — a tornado which touched down in June 1988 just scraped by the old homestead. Developers have put enormous pressure to turn many of the 266 tillable acres into a golf course. A proposed Rt. 13 alternative roadway, which would have torn right through the corn farm, was narrowly defeated.

Through it all, the owners have insisted they have a right to farm and a right to the land that has fueled their livelihood through eight generations.

And now, through the work of owners W. Gail Smith and her children, S. Rodmond "S.R." Smith III and Lea Smith Carl, Hill Island Farm perseveres as a Delaware Century Farm.

A nominee for the National Register of Historic Places, the farm is nestled between St. Andrews School (where the film, "Dead Poets Society," was made) and "Hell Island" on the Appoquinimink River in New Castle County.

New York Eggs

April 15, 1992

Prices on the large sizes were higher, and medium prices were unchanged. Trade sentiment was steady to instances firm where premiums were paid to secure extra supplies. Demand continued good with widespread features on large at 49-59 cents with restrictions, 79 cents no restrictions, and 3 dozen medium for $1.00 with coupon. Supplies were adequate to barely adequate, and last minute holiday inquiry for additional eggs found very limted offerings at premium prices.

Trucklot buying interest centered around tight supplies of yellow skin wings for retail needs.

Boneless skinless breasts were in good balance with a fair demand with some additional buying interest showing for late week. Line run breasts were in close balance with trade needs, some processors asked higher prices but all trades were at steady prices. Leg quarters were fully adequate to ample with asking prices trending lower. Yellow skin wings were short of meeting a very good demand and trading was at higher prices; white skin wings were in close balance to tight.

The market tone remained barely steady to weak. Holiday buying activity had come to an end and forward interest was lacking enthusiasm. Increasingly competitive pricing compared to costs of raw materials continued to disturb further processors. Floor stocks were in good balance to easily satisfy current buyer needs.

Delmarva Broiler Fryer

April 15, 1992

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was light to very light. Supplies were fully adequate to ample and extra product remained slow in clearing. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchang- ed at 46 to 58 cents, but some product was negotiable at less than normal practices in an effort to clear stocks. Live supplies were moderate to light. Weights were desirable to heavy. Slaughter schedules reflected some reduction in operations today which were moderately heavy overall. Trade sentiment was no better than steady; improved for next week. Wings remained in tight supply for a good demand. Other parts were about steady.

National Egg Market

April 15, 1992

Prices were unchanged to higher in the Northeast on the large sizes, unchanged on the balance. The market tone was steady to firm in the Northeast, and generally steady elsewhere. Demand for cartoned eggs was good to very good. Inter-dealer inquiry was also quite active for cartoned or graded loose eggs for immediate delivery and offerings were very limited and premium priced. Retail specials were fairly widespread and provided a strong demand. Supplies were adequate to short. Breakers were inactive buyers of shell eggs other than regular commitments. Live hen offerings were sufficient for the light to moderate demand.

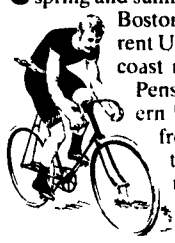
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

APRIL 20-26, 1992

EARTH DAY, APRIL 22.

AROUND THE WORLD

On April 22, 1884, Thomas Stevens embarked from San Francisco on his bicycle trip around the world He spent the spring and summer pedaling across America and arrived in Boston 125 days later, on August 24th. (The current U S transcontinental record from west to east coast is 8 days, 9 hours, 47 minutes set by Pete Penseyres in July 1986 Of course, Pete's modern bike was quite different from the 50-inch front wheel model used by Mr Stevens) From there he took a boat to Europe and continued his journey, actually pedaling about 13,500 miles by December 17, 1886, when he arrived in Yokohama, Japan Boarding the City of Peking in Yokahama, he continued on to San Francisco, completing his trip on January 4, 1887



Well begun is half done.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Before painting, run a comb through the brush to remove loose bristles.

EARTHWISE

Starting your spring cleaning? Why not try a homemade cleaning solution instead of expensive and often toxic old standbys? A good all-purpose cleaner is 1/4 cup borax and 1/4 cup vinegar in 2 gallons hot water Up to 1 tablespoon of liquid soap (not detergent) may be added Vinegar cuts through mildew and borax disinfects and deodorizes Borax is inexpensive, all-natural, nontoxic, and easily obtained For more information call the Dial Corporation at 1-800-457-8739, and ask for their free booklet "Borax, The Magic Crystal"

1 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons fresh, chopped dill

OPINION

Lower SCC Counts Prove Wholesomeness Of Dairy Products

Dairymen know that the Somatic Cell Counts (SCC) in Grade A milk determines the quality of the product they produce. In addition, the level of SCC has a direct reflection on cheese yields. Higher SCC counts mean lower cheese yields.

High SCC can also lead to off-flavors in cream cheese and butter. And lower protein, solids not fat, and butterfat may also be part of the results.

Increased awareness of the impact that SCC has on milk quality and the yield of dairy products has caused the National Conference on Interstate Milk Shipments to lower the acceptable levels of SCC. Effective July 1, 1993, the legal limit of SCC will be lowered to 750,000. Most dairy farmers are aware that high SCC is a reflection on udder health. Healthy udders produce more milk and fatten the milk check.

While compliance with the new limits will not be difficult or a problem for most producers, it should be recognized that some industry officials will continue to seek a lower standard. The standard can only be changed with proposals that are made and adopted at the National Conference on Interstate Milk Shipments. The last conference was held in 1991 and is scheduled every two years. So in the 1993 conference, another change may be forthcoming.

Historical data from the U.S. and other countries may be helpful in visualizing the big picture. In the U. S., the legal limit for SCC was set at 3.5 million in 1965; 1,5 million in 1970; 1.0 million in 1986 and 750,000 in 1993. In Canada a six year program was implemented to lower the regulatory limits from 800,000 to 500,000. In the European Community the regulatory limit has been 500,000 for many years but was set at 400,000 starting in January of 1992. Some individual states also have lower standards.

At the next NCIMS Conference we expect the National Mastitis Council will propose to lower the bulk tank SCC to 500,000. The 500,000 standard was originally proposed at the 1991 Conference by the Mastitis Council and endorsed by the American Association of Bovine Practitioners.

Whether a change in the SCC standard will be adopted and further reduced is not known, but certainly some countries and individual states are moving their standards down to or below the 500,000 mark. And it is quite likely the trend will keep moving downward.

Because this emphasizes a continued improvement in milk quality, we believe this is a progressive step for the dairy industry. This also shows consumers that dairy products are and continue to be very wholesome foods on their dinner tables.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Control Mastitis In Heifers

Research studies show that 20 to 70 per cent of heifers have mastitis, even before calving.

The staph species represents a large number of these cases. The staph bacteria may colonize on or inside the calf's udder, starting at a very young age. They could infect the heifer by being sucked by another calf, which had consumed some staph containing milk, or the bacteria may be spread by flies as the flies travel from cows to calves.

To minimize the risk of heifers acquiring mastitis, house calves in individual pens and hutches so they will not suck one another. Also, do not feed staph containing milk to calves that may suck one another. Segregate heifers from cows and control flies.

By properly managing calves and heifers, you should be able to reduce the level of mastitis in heifers.

To Look For Black Cutworms

Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent, reminds us that black cutworms are one of the first spring insects to be on the outlook for.

The black cutworm is a migratory insect in Pennsylvania. They begin to move into the state in late March and early April.

When it arrives in the state, there are very few crops for the adults to lay their eggs on. Therefore, the adult females seek winter annual weeds such as chickweed, mustards, and shepherds purse to lay their eggs.

Fields which have these weeds and are planted to corn have a high potential for cutworm feeding after eggs hatch. However, if weeds are eliminated at least 10 days prior to corn planting, the problem may be greatly reduced.

By eliminating the weeds, when the eggs hatch, the larvae will die for lack of food. Fields which had winter annual weeds growing should be scouted for cutworm feeding activity.

When 3 per cent of the corn plants are cut off and there are 5 or more cutworms per 100 plants, the field should be sprayed.

Tobacco Plant Population

The effects of plant spacing on yield is an often-asked question.

If you are using 40 inch rows and change your plant spacing from 26 inches to 24 inches, you will increase your plant population from 6,031 plants per acre to 6,534 plants per acre. This would be an increase of 503 plants per acre or about 100 sticks per acre.

Research has shown that, in most growing seasons, as plant population increases, yield per plant decreases. Thus, you will see very little increase in yield per acre while you increase your work load.

Based on our experience, we recommend a plant population of 6,000 to 6,100 plants per acre.

ROLLING AWAY THE STONES?

April 19, 1992

Background Scripture: Romans 6:1-11.

Devotional Scripture: Mark 15:42 through 16:8.

No matter how often I read this account, each time I am struck by the freshness and urgency of its message. No one tells of the death and resurrection of Jesus as simply and pointedly as Mark does. He wastes no words: yet nothing essential is left out.

Here is the enigmatic Joseph of Arimathea, whom Mark describes as "a respected member of the council, who was also looking for the kingdom of God." Some people have observed — unfairly, I think — that Joseph didn't commit himself until after the nastmess of Calvary was over. Yet, here is a man, often portrayed as the timid disciple, who, Mark says, "took courage and went to Pilate, and asked for the body of Jesus" (15:43). Facing Pilate and his own peers of the council and asking for the body of Jesus took considerable courage. Not even his closest disciples had manifested that kind of brave resolve. Maybe Nicodemus was late in declaring himself for Jesus, but not too late. He stepped forward when everyone else was still in hiding. Perhaps the cross gave him the courage he formerly lacked.

GRAVESTONES

There is a starkness in Mark's account: Joseph of Arimathea "laid him in a tomb which had been hewn out of rock; and he rolled a stone against the door of the tomb" (15:46). That's the way it is with death: the terrible finality of it all. Joseph rolled a huge stone across the entrance to the tomb and that was that! We put up a gravestone and we know that is Ihe end of a once-vibrant life. We write "finis" to a once-promising career, marriage, or business venture. There are so many failures and death in life and each one is marked with some kind of stone, literally or figuratively.

But what seems to be the end of things is not necessarily the end. What we regard as death, defeat and disappointment may be only the beginning of something else. For, as one commentator has remarked, "history shows that God never notices stones. Earth's finalities are never his. " So using our God-given minds and seeing no further than our own eyes can see, we roll our stones of death and defeat, never dreaming that Something or Someone has the power to roll them away.

THE STONE ROLLED BACK

We can understand why the three women, Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Salome should wonder: "Who will roll away the stone for us from the door of the tomb?" (16:3). But, when they got there, "they saw that the stone was rolled back; for it was very large." The huge stone of Joseph of Arimathea was heavy, but not heavy enough to keep Jesus in his tomb.

So it is with us: the stones we place to mark our defeats and failures, our disappointed hopes and unfulfilled faith, are heavy and often seem immovable. But the Easter message tells us that God can roll away these great stones, just as he rolled away the stone before the tomb of Jesus. The key to our faith is found in the message of the angel inside the tomb: "Do not be amazed; you seek Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucitied He has risen, he is not there" (I 6:7).

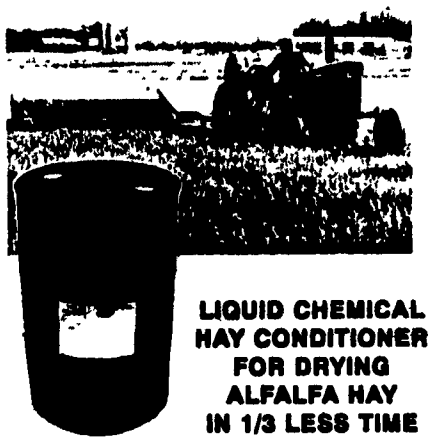
SWATHER'S CHOICE

ALFALFA HAY CONDITIONER

NEW!



LIQUID CHEMICAL HAY CONDITIONER FOR DRYING ALFALFA HAY IN 1/3 LESS TIME

Alfalfa and other legume crops have a coating of wax. While this coating is a natural protection for the growing plant, it is an inhibitor to moisture loss in field curing and to feed utilization in the digestive system of ruminant animals. The presence of this coating of wax also makes the hay stem brittle and less palatable to livestock.

Swather's Choice "washes off" the outside waxy coating of alfalfa, allowing for the water inside the plant to evaporate more rapidly than in untreated hay. Swather's Choice is actually a soap that is safe for livestock consumption and won't affect palatability.

In studies at Michigan State University, hay treated with the ingredients in Swather's Choice had higher protein and lower fiber. In a further study at Utah State University, cows consumed 2.2 pounds more treated hay per day.

Unlike conventional granular drying agents, Swather's Choice is a liquid chemical hay conditioner. It is easily tank mixed with water and requires only fifteen gallons per acre in most applications, compared with the conventional products that are normally applied at 30 gallons per acre.

Compared with last week: Feeder steers and heifers over 650 lb. $1.00-$2.00 lower; under 650 lb. steers steady to $1.00 lower; heifers under 650 lb. steady to $1.00 higher, advance on stockers. "Efficiency Is The Key To Profit"

Pennsylvania Farmers Association Holds PAC Fund Raiser

in the USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service, first as a legislative assistant and then director of legislative affairs.

Prior to that, he served as a legislative assistant to Larry J. Hopkins, a Kentucky congressman, and to Secretary of the Air Force Verne Orr. He was also a field representative for the Republican National Committee in five states.

In his speech, Blumenthal talked about several issues, and told of what President Bush is doing to help. He also said that farmers should support Bush's efforts to create a world free-trade agreement.

Blumenthal, of Arlington, Va., said that PFA members had taken him on a tour early Wednesday of various agricultural facilities in the area, including Donald Bollinger's poultry facilities in Kleinfeltersville, Dennis Grumbine's tractor sales business in Myerstown, and several other farms.

"I was impressed," he said, adding that some of the bureaucratic problems outlined to him by the people he met he was going to take back to Washington with him.

He said that many people in Washington sit and work on things to help farmers, but they don't get out to see exactly what is going on.

As far as fair trade, Blumenthal's talk sounded something of Bush re-election speech, as he promoted at length Bush initiatives and goals.

"The future is world trade," Blumenthal said. "For that, the Uraguay Round (of the talks for a General Agreement On Trade and Tariffs) is important to get free trade.

The president has said that agriculture is the most important item to settle in order to get free trade, Blumenthal said, adding that, "We may not get everything. But Clayton Yueter (former secretary of agriculture) set high goals and set a precedent. He knew we had to set our goals high with agriculture."

According to Blumenthal, the bottom line is that no matter what kind of trade agreement is worked out, there will still be problems. Not everyone benefits equally with the effects of any agreement, he said.

He talked about a trade proposal that can mean an extra $4 billion to $5 billion in extra exports between now and 1998.

He also discussed somewhat the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), which would open up free trade between Canada, the United States and Mexico.

According to Blumenthal the president's proposal would increase our current trade surplus with Mexico by a third, while increasing Mexico's by a fifth.

Further, Blumenthal said that the U.S.'s trading position, between Europe and Asia will serve us well in maintaining a strong export market.

Other directions in agriculture have also helped open up markets and increase agriculture's positive-side trade balance. He talked specifically about alternative agricultural products such as biodegradable ag products, such as golf tees and newspaper ink made from soybean oil.

"Ethanol is expected to consume the largest volume (of the market for alternative agriculture products).

According to Blumenthal, Bush should get credit for recognizing the importance of alternative fuels use and the need to expand the uses of agricultural products.

(Editor's Note: Alternative fuels and federal support for ethanol production and similar programs were initiated by President Carter, after oil prices rose over a dollar during the late 1970s. Also, the National Corn Growers have recently issued statements criticizing the Environmental Protection Agency and the Bush administration for failing to include ethanol as a strong alternative fuel to reduce fuel emmissions to cut back on damage to the ozone.)

"Agriculture is doing well, but that's one area," Blumenthal said. "The U.S. balance in total is in deficit."

However, Blumenthal said the deficit is much reduced from what it was four years ago. According to Blumenthal, four years ago, the deficit was $149 billion a year. This year it is down to $6 billion a year.

"We are very close to a balance," he said.

He said it came about " ... with hard shakeouts with industry. It has been tough, but, we're in recovery."

He said the long range picture "looks very good."

He said that of the exports, only 7 percent of the U.S. production is sold oversees, while those rates are 9 percent for Germany and Japan. "If we gain 2 percent, we will have a significant job increase.

"Our hope is that having jobs that produce for export is better than only jobs for domestic market," he said.

On other topics, he said that farmers have to tell their story, not only as providing the backbone strength for the economy, but also with what agriculturalists are doing to benefit the environment.

"The public doesn't appreciate all you're doing and we need to get that message out," he said, without specifying how.

He said the issue of personal property rights and wetlands are still be straightened out, but he promised that efforts are being made to reduce or eliminate overregulation. He said that there were 80,000 comments on wetlands issues. "It did get good input from the farm sector."

He said that environmental issues are a big topic in Washington, as well as animal rights. "It gets crazy," he said.

He talked about a problem with wild boros which, in the past, when they out grew their range, a large number were shot for herd health reasons.

Animal rightists wanted the shooting to stop and the federal government sponsored and saw through the adoption program.

After that program was in place, however, the federal government got pulled into feeding these adopted animals because people couldn't afford to keep them.

He said that more recently there was a boro overpopulation problem in Puerto Rico and the federal government, at the pressure of animal rightists, starting using birth control on the donkeys.

However, the federal government then got held up with that program because an environmental impact statement wasn't performed prior to giving the donkeys the birth control and reducing their impact on the environment.

In other areas, he talked about how efforts are being made to look at changing the way local federal offices are managed. He said a better access program is being examined. It might mean changing hours to fit the hours that the majority of citizens are off work and can access those offices.

Blumenthal also discussed the president's goals for rebuilding the nation's education system; how the president wants to keep the interest rate from changing ("Every 1 point change means $700 million nationally in farm income," he said.); health care reforms, capital gains tax breaks; welfare reform and litigation reform (make those who sue and fail to win pay the defendent's costs); regulatory reform, etc.

As a gift, PFA president Keith Eckel presented Blumenthal with a handmade quilt wall hanging which was made in Lancaster.

Dairy Industry Must Work Together To Forge Future

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

BALTIMORE, Md. — People within the dairy industry can't afford to lose their patience with each other over industry issues, but must focus instead on furthering the image and soundness of the industry by working together.

That was the basic message of a number of speakers who addressed a conference of dairy industry representatives at a recent Northeast Dairy Conference held at the Omni Inner Habor Inn in Baltimore, Md.

The annual conference serves as a forum for representatives of various groups to gather and hear different perspectives on the health of the dairy industry, the apparent direction and views on what must be done to keep the industry sound.

A recurring theme in all talks was that the dairy industry must not continue to factionalize during times of change and controversy, creating short-lived and issue-driven organizations which further one- or two-issue points of view.

Rather, leadership in existing organizations must be responsive to members' needs and be more communicative about activities, policies and goals.

Steven A. Larson, senior editor of Hoard's Dairyman, Fort Atkinson, Wis., said as much in his presentation on communication and the dairy industry.

Larson said he addressed the issue with reservation, because it is an issue that is not easy to address.

He said that the industry's history of successful communication — internal and external — has not been good.

Further, he said that money is short and the issues present a great challenge to maintain and keep strong channels of communication without alienating groups within the industry.

"Let me use BST as an example," Larson said. "Whether we're for it or against it, if it's approved some day, there will be reaction from food activists and consumers. Just look at what is happening with irradiated foods."

Larson said that the internal split in the dairy industry brought on by the possibility of using leading edge technology within the dairy industry has negatively affected the ability of representative groups to address the issue before the public with great credibility that positions issued are in line with industry desires.

He said that the BST manufacturers and the Animal Health Institute have "had their hands slapped by (the Food and Drug Administration) FDA, and the Dairy Information and News Center . . . which was forced to knuckle under to grassroots reactionaries. We can thank anti-technology gadflies, like Jeremy Rifkin and Samuel Epstein for both developments," Larson said.

According to the print newsman, the problem of communications can be rectified, but "it's gong to take money, commitment and, more improtantly, a stronger sense of direction and cohesion among industry leadership to get the job done."

Some of the things which hurt the agricultural press is that there are fewer and fewer readers, and thus fewer numbers of advertisers to support publications. He said the competition among publications has gotten "fierce."

"This intense competition, coupled with a sort of post-Watergate fram of mind and varying levels of industry commitment and involvement among publications have made our industry more vulnerable to a negative style of journalism — what I refer to as 'judge and jury' journalism. Guilty until proven innocent."

Larson said that those within the industry must look to the farm press as allies and not enemies. He said that open lines of communication must be maintained and that a commitment to providing accurate and useful information for those in agriculture must be made.

Further he provided a tip for those within the industry who deal with the media.

"At any meetings likely to be attended by press, I would strongly urge speakers to have their comments prepared in writing ahead of time. Have extra copies for reporters.

"This makes them feel like you are working with them, not against them. And it makes it more likely that your presentation will be reported accurately."

Larson said that ag organization leaders must do a better job of communicating with members. He said that unscientific poll of dairy men and women that he performed supported his opinion that leaders and members have been growing further and further apart.

Quoting several different responses to his inquiries, Larson illustrated the frustration at the member level and the perceptions that are there.

Larson quoted a Wisconsin dairyman as saying, "'Directors and managers get caught up in a whirl of power and travel. Most of them have well-established farms being run by relatives or key employees. They've forgotten what it's like to have a farm to pay for and kids to educate.'"

Other comments were along the same line.

"When it comes to their organizations, dairy farmers feel disappointed, suspicious, unassured. Almost betrayed. They are not convinced their leaders are acting in their best interest," Larson said.

However, Larson tempered his critical observation by acknowledging, "We have to be realistic about the big picture. This is a diverse industry, and there's always going to be room for differences of opinion."

Also, Larson said, "It's also true that dairy farmers deserve the credit or blame for electing their delegates and directors. However, we think they have a sense of ineffectiveness in their organization, must like the general population feels divorced from state and federal governments."

However, Larson said things are changing.

"Recently we've seen major changes in some dairy and farm leadership positions. We expect more changes in management, officers and directors of a variety of dairy organizations.

"Also, I grant we can expect more discontent when there's $14 milk instead of $16 milk."

DV Offers FFA Officer Scholarships

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Delaware Valley College has recently published more details of the announcement of awarding Pennsylvania State FFA officers scholarships to their institution.

These "significant funds are available to support students who bring outstanding academic and leadership qualities to our campus," states Jane H. Anthell, Dean of Enrollment Management at Del Val.

According to Robert Sauer, Director of Student Financial Aid - "Scholarships will be awarded to those resident students who have been elected state officers. The scholarships are valued at $4,500 per academic year and if awarded with other institutionally funded academic scholarships or grants will enable the recipient to receive up to a maximum of $7,500. The scholarships are renewable each year based on good academic standing and citizenship."

State officers will first have their admissions evaluated based on SAT and EPA scores. Immediately they may qualify for grants or scholarships of $2,000-$6,500, just as a student enrolled at Del Val.

The state officer scholarship is then applied on top of that up to $7,500.

Sauer further stressed that if any student had further need of financial assistance, that amount would be applied on top of the $7,500. He also pointed out that need and non-need based grants would not interfere with the awarding of the full amount, e.g., if a state officer received a scholarship from a Rotary club in the amount of $3,000, the $3,000 would not be deducted from the state officer scholarship amount.

From left, Steve Zento, admissions, DVC; George Inhof, Eastern Region State FFA vice president and Robert Sauer, financial aid dept., DVC. Inhof has been accepted under the scholarship program.

These scholarships have been secured for present and future state officers through the efforts of The Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, working jointly with Delaware Valley College.

Mary Jo Cancelmo, Executive Director of the Foundation, states, "Delaware Valley College has been in the forefront of recognizing the value and quality found in Pennsylvania State FFA officers. They have made the initial step in rewarding the state officers for their hard work for the FFA and for agriculture in Pennsylvania."

The Foundation thanks Delaware Valley College for this generous contribution toward state officer scholarships - a contribution with a potential value of $49,500 a year for four years for each FFA state officer team.

If you are thinking about running for state office and would like to find out more about state officer scholarships offered by Delaware Valley College, an open house will be held Tuesday, May 19 at the Delaware Valley College, in Doylestown. Call Steve Zenko, admissions, (215) 345-1500, for further information and reservations.

County And Trust Work Together

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)— Two East Drumore Twp. farms have been preserved by Lancaster Farmland Trust and the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board in Pennsylvania's second "Reimbursable Easement Acquisition." The Agricultural Preserve Board and the Trust also cooperated in the state's first reimbursable acquisition.

At the request of the County, the Farmland Trust, a private, non-profit preservation group, purchased permanent conservation easements on the two properties. The Trust then transferred the easements to the county program which reimbursed the Trust for its costs.

The two groups decided to coordinate their efforts when it was learned that the Ernest Mellinger farm, which is located just south of Quarryville in East Drumore, was up for sale as two farms, 80 acres and 76 acres respectively. Due to its location, the farm was deemed a high prioroty by the County Agricultural Preserve Board. Tom Daniels, director of the county program, stated "This farm was on the market, fairly close to sewer, and in an important location on Rte. 222 near Quarryville. It was our assessment that the farm could be sold for development and we wanted to preserve it for agriculture."

The county was unable to act quickly to save the farms however, and asked Lancaster Farmland Trust, a qualified, non-profit farmland preservation organization, to purchase the conservation easements on the properties. The easements were valued at $122,000 and $103,445. The County would then reimburse the Trust for its costs. The Trust agreed, committed staff to the project and was able to complete the transaction within several months. The two farms are now permanently preserved and owned by Plain Sect farmers.

Alan Musselman, executive director of the Trust, said, "Because the Trust is a privately funded, non-profit organization, we are able to act quickly to preserve land. I'm very pleased that we were able to work with the county to save these two key farms. The combination of these two newly preserved farms and the presence of another farm in the vicinity creates an effective urban growth boundary around the borough of Quarryville."

To date, no other county in the state has preserved as much farmland as Lancaster County, or has utilized the state provision allowing county programs to request the assistance of a private non-profit in urgent circumstances. The Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board, the publicly funded, county government program, has preserved 10,720 acres since 1980. Lancaster Farmland Trust in a non-profit farmland preservation group, funded solely through the private contributions of its members and has protected over 2500 acres since 1988. To contact the Trust for more information, write: Lancaster Farmland Trust, P.O. Box 1562, Lancaster, PA 17603, or call (717) 293-0707.

DHIA Names Smith Farm Best Managed In Top Dairy County

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

REXMONT (Lebanon Co.) — Early American folk philosopher Henry David Thoreau had written that it was difficult to say whether the land owned the farmer, or whether the farmer owned the land.

For David and Kathy Smith of Lebanon, the answer is simple.

The farm will not own them.

They refuse to isolate themselves and their children in an insulated, cut-off world filled only with people who farm. They also refuse to give in to the "we" and "they" social structure that can polarize farming and non-farming people.

Still, a farm demands attention.

And for the Smiths, that's not a problem. They see the farm as both a pleasure and a business — not an isolation ward.

They said they believe that when someone says they're in the barn all the time, that's because they want to be in the barn all the time. No one has to be in the barn all the time.

So Dave and Kathy manage the farm as a business they can run.

Last year, the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (Pa.DHIA) recognized their management efforts with an award.

Pa.DHIA presented the couple with the title of best managed farm in Lebanon County.

No small fete in a county which for the third straight year topped the state for production, among Pa.DHIA-member herds.

Lebanon County has had the leading average milk production and/or the top average for fat and protein production.

Smith said he appreciates the award, but he wasn't sure that he really deserves a lot of attention.

He was recognized because his herd improved its rolling herd average by 2,800 pounds of milk — but, it came a year after the herd dropped its average by 2,400 pounds.

Currently, the grade-Holstein, Smith-herd is averaging more than 20,000 pounds of milk.

Dave said that he's still not sure what caused the drop in production during 1990.

"Maybe it was because of the forage quality that year. It was a wet spring. I did experiment with a couple of different top dressings," he said.

One of them was a urea-based nitrogen supplement.

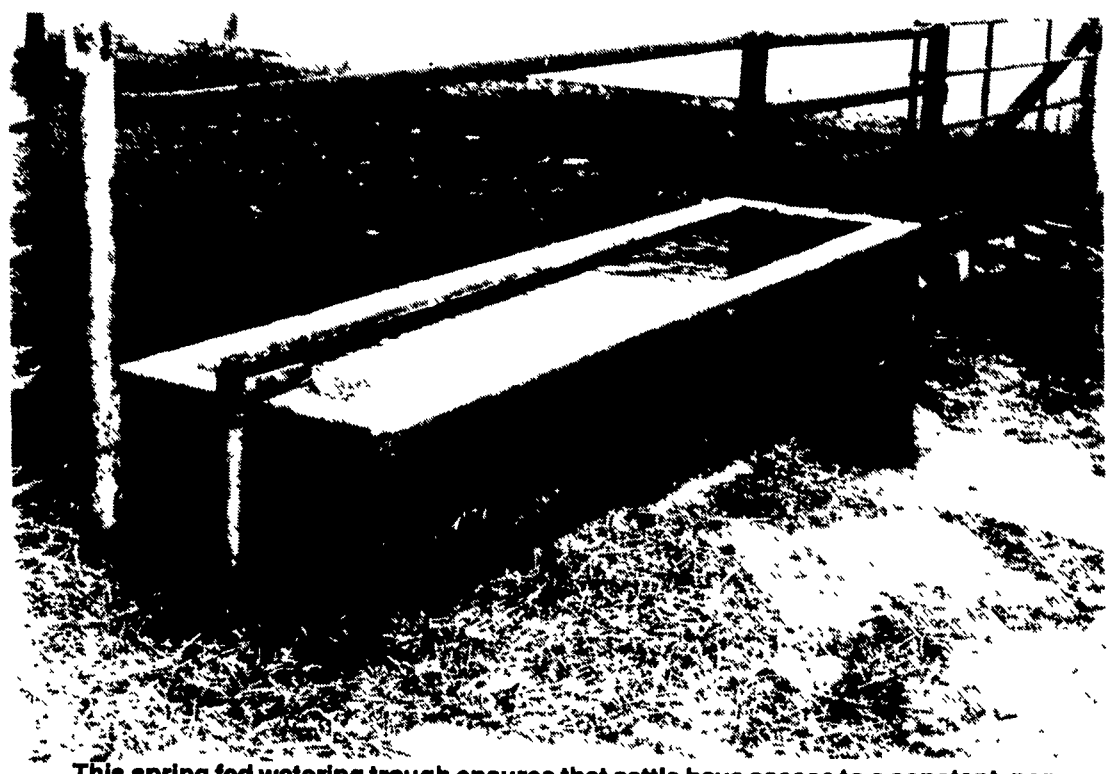
However, it didn't work for his herd. The production went down.

Experts say that if forages provide enough protein, the additional nitrogen from the urea supplement could create an imbalance in the rumen microbe populations, which would also alter the rumen pH, both of which can depress milk production.

Also, the herd average age had changed significantly that year, Dave said.

A number of the original cows he and Kathy had when they started farming in the early 1980s were culled. Younger cows and first calf heifers started coming on line.

David and Kathy Smith take time after cleaning the milkhouse to discuss some of the history of the farm they are buying, and to decide what's for supper.



This spring fed watering trough ensures that cattle have access to a constant, non-freezing, no-energy, fresh water supply.

This cow turns its head away from the camera flash, but returned to the grain mix in the manger.

Using a tie stall facility, Dave Smith removes a milking claw from one of his grade Holsteins.

The real cause of the problem is still unknown, Dave said, but it is corrected now.

Recognizing the Smiths is appropriate, according to peers and experts, no matter the amount of humility with which the Smiths accept it. After all, how many dairyfarmers can have their herd drop that much average milk production and then make management changes that not only recover the lost production, but increase it by an additional 400 pounds in one year?

Dave said using high moisture corn may have helped.

He hand feeds about a 50-50 haylage-silage mix, and about 7 pounds of alfalfa-orchard grass hay per day, high moisture corn and a pellet additive, along with a grain top dressing tailored to the cows' needs.

Dave, 34, and Kathy are buying the farm where Dave grew up.

It is a 102-acre operation in the rapidly urbanizing Lebanon County southern sector, just east of Rexmont. They rent an additional 50 acres.

Located on the Lebanon Valley floor just north of the South Mountains, it is a unique setting — a place where the red sandstone of the mountain ridge meets the chalky loam of the limestone valley.

In fact, while many of the older stone barns in the area are constructed of almost all white and grey limestone block, the Smith barn is a mix of limestone block with red sandstone cornerstones, indicating the proximity to sources of both building materials.

From the barnyard, the view of the back property is State Game Lands forest which adjoins the farm's pasture and crop fields.

A strip of woodland (also part of the Smith property) also serves as a buffer from the housing that has been creeping into the surrounding fields and forests.

A LOW COST DHIA PROGRAM TO MANAGE YOUR HERD?

If you're not using Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Association to keep track of your cows, this program is for you. Unlike the Official DHI program, where the supervisor stays on the farm and collects all the data and samples, this program "OWNER SAMPLER" you the client can do the work and eliminate the labor cost of the technician.

For accurate production records and complete processing, it is necessary to report fresh dates, dry dates, purchased and removed dates. Sick cows, breeding records and feeding data are optional and can also be entered if you choose to.

The computer generated reports produced from this data are identical to those produced for the "official" type programs, but OWNER SAMPLER records are "unofficial" by USDA, NAAB and Breed Association, but every bit as valuable to you the member for management purposes.

The OWNER SAMPLER has the privilege of making on the spot adjustments to milk weights for sick cows, odd milking hours and for the rare occasion of a meter malfunction. You can also set up the "test day" in advance and are spared the need to comply with the policies and procedures governing "official" programs.

PA DHIA offers the following different management OWNER SAMPLER records:

40 DHI-OS — Owner-Sampler — All milkings in a 24-hour period are weighed and sampled.

41 DHI-OS-AP — Owner-Sampler AM/PM — where only one milking is weighed and sampled monthly on an alternating basis for 2 x herds. For 3x herds, 2 milkings are weighed and one sampled on an alternating basis.

42 DHI-OS-APCS — Owner-Sampler AMm/PM Component Sample — All milkings in a 24-hour period are weighed and one milking sampled monthly on an alternating basis.

43 DHI-OS-MO — Owner-Sampler Milk Only — All milkings in a 24-hour period are weighed, but not sampled.

44 EHI-OS-MO-AP — Owner-Sampler Milk Only AM/PM — Only one milking is weighed on an alternating basis each month, but not sampled.

45 DHI-OS-AC — Owner-Sampler Average Components — with average breed or plant components used - Only All milking in a 24-hour period is weighed each month and average test is used for each cow.

46 DHI-OS-AP-AC — Owner-Sampler AM/PM Average Components — with average breed or plant components used — Only one milking is weighed on alternating basis each month and an average test is used for each cow.

47 DHI-OS-TC — Owner-Sampler with tri-monthly component test used — all milkings are weighed monthly, but component sampling is conducted every third month.

48 DHI-OS-MO-TMW — Owner-Sampler Milk-Only Tri-Monthly Weights - With tri-monthly milk weights — milk weights are taken every 3 months.

DHIA has changed to meet the needs of its members, and the availability of programs such as these needs to be made known. Because these records are owner-sample management records, the interval between "test days" can be determined by member needs, placing at least a minimal type program within reach of any milk producer. Our number is 1-800-DHI-Test or 1-800-344-8378 to go on test or for more information on our testing programs.

How Does Your Herd Compare?

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — This data is pulled from Pennsylvania DHIA's mainframe computer each week. It is a one-week summary representing approximately one-fourth of the herds on test, as they are tested monthly.

These data are valuable from a business management standpoint and can be used for comparing your operations to the averages from almost 1,400 herds across the state.

February Nonfat Solids Worth 91 Cents

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Order No. 4 producer milk prices for February 1992 were $2.33 per hundredweight (cwt.) for base milk, 91 cents per pound for nonfat milk solids and 94 cents per pound for butterfat.

The standardized base milk price per hundredweight for producer milk with the market average nonfat milk solids content and 3.5 percent butterfat would have been $13.54. The excess price would have been $11.21 per cwt.

This represents a base price increase of $1.55 per cwt. from the previous year.

The excess price increased $1.13 from last February. The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was 91.46 cents per pound for the month.

The gross value of February producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat, was $70.9 million, compared to $57.2 million last February.

The volume of milk pooled under the order 4 in February was 538.7 million pounds. That was 47 million pounds more than the same time last year.

The daily delivery per producer at 3,359 pounds was up 171 pounds or 5.4 percent from last February.

A total of 5,531 producers supplied Order 4 pool handlers during the month, an increase of 23 handlers from a year ago.

Clas I producer milk totaled 248.9 million pounds, an increase of 3.4 million pounds from last February, but also a decrease of 2.1 percent from last year on a average daily basis.

Class I milk sales accounted for 46.21 percent of the total producer receipts during the leap-year month, compared with 49.94 percent last February.

Class II milk in February totaled 101.3 million pounds and accounted for 18.81 percent of use of producer milk.

The new Class III milk use totaled 101.3 million pounds and accounded for 34.98 percent of the milk use.

Total milk for nonfluid uses increased 43.6 million pounds or 13.7 percent on an average daily basis compared to last February.

Base milk accounted for 84.51 percent of the total amount in February milk. That was an increase from 83.22 percent the previous year.

Total nonfat milk solids production for the month was 46.8 million pounds. The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.69 percent. The average butterfat test was 3.82 percent. Last Feburary the average butterfat test was 3.76 percent.

Order 4 pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 223.1 million pounds during January, an increase of 2.4 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

MMI Allocates $3.7 Million

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Milk Marketing Inc. (MMI) recently allocated $3.7 million to its 6,000 dairy producer members.

The 1992 allocation represents the amount of equity MMI patrons and members have reinvested in their cooperative for fiscal year July 1, 1990 to June 30, 1991.

"Equity is the net retain margins (patronage dividends) and capital retains invested in the cooperative by its members. It is returned to members after it has performed the important function of providing the Association with the necessary capital to finance its operations," said Don Schriver, director of member relations and public affairs.

Currently, MMI allocations are redeemed in cash to members on a 10-year rotating basis. The rotation is at the discretion of MMI's board of directors.

Despite The Farmer's Hours These Veteran Milk Testers Would Do It Again

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

GEORGETOWN (Lancaster Co.)—In 1957 when Harold Probst started to test milk in southeast Lancaster County, only one or two of his farmers had a bulk tank, there were no pipeline milkers and the samples were run at home, 36 at a time.

"They now call us supervisors or technicians," Harold said in an interview Monday. "But we still think of ourselves as milk testers."

Harold uses the term "we" because his wife Joan has been testing milk almost as long. In fact, Harold met Joan over a milk pail. Harold was the milk tester for Joan's home herd, and even before they were formally engaged, Harold had Joan out testing milk on other farms.

"Harold wanted to make sure I knew how to do the work before we got married," Joan laughs.

They did get married a year later, built a house in 1962 and reared three children all the while juggling daily schedules to meet all the various times different farmers start to milk their cows in the morning.

"On a typical day we are at the job anywhere from 3:30 a.m. to 6:30 a.m.," Harold said. "The average time is 5 a.m. We eat breakfast anytime from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m. if we eat at all. A lot of our time is spent out at farms to pick up from farmers who take their own samples. And we copy all the records over from barn sheets too."

At present the husband/wife team service 167 herds with about 9000 cows each month. Of these herds, 28 are on two-time milking; 45 are on one-time milking and 94 are owner sampler herds. Only one of the owner sampler herds is not owned by an Amish farmer. Of course, quite a few Amish farmers are also on official DHIA.

Nearly all the "English" herds have pipelines and therefore use mechanical weight meters on test day. But the old-fashioned weight scales is still used where pipelines are not in place.

Over the years, the Probsts have seen many changes. But the greatest of these changes is in production levels. Feed salesmen work with the farmers, and they are doing a good job. Amish farmers as well as others are up on these feeding methods. In fact, one Amish herd would have topped the yearly County average if he had been accepting publicity.

Herd size has increased too. But Harold doesn't think most herds can expand much more because of the number of cows per acre local farmers have now.

"Lancaster County is so competitive for land," Joan said. "Dairymen here need to be sharp and up on what is what because if they get behind a little, there is someone ready to come in and snitch away their land."

Lancaster DHIA

Of the 1130 herds in Lancaster County on test, thirty-nine percent or a total of 442 herds are on AM-PM and forty-two percent or 479 herds are on owner sampler. Another 120 herds are currently on a private testing program, and probes have gone out from persons who are interested in starting up additional private testing programs.

"We are not putting pressure on any one of our members," Wenger said. "We just want to give them a choice. They will have the same tester regardless if they go to Raleigh or if they stay with Pennsylvania."

As soon as the release request forms are signed by the dairymen who want to have their records transfered, they will be individually sent to Pennsylvania's board of directors for approval.

Joan and Harold Probst have a combined total nearly 70 years of service to Red Rose DHIA, and they continue to enjoy their work with dairymen and cows.

"Our largest herd just moved to Idaho," Harold said. "And the second largest is trying to sell the farm to move to Iowa or Wisconsin. If you want to get sons into the farm-noted that one of her cows produced more milk than her neighbor's Holsteins.

Jerseys Are Tops

"I tease him about it," she said. During her presentation she recited figures that show Jersey milk is higher in protein and fat than Holsteins.

Because they are smaller, they eat less and are thus more cost effective for farmers, she said.

Carol Dreisbach, information director for the American Jersey Cattle Club, was the featured speaker during the Sunday breakfast.

A native of Berks County, Dreisbach spoke on animal welfare from a business perspective.

"Farmers have to be careful about how we treat our animals," she said, noting that consumers are concerned about the safety of the food supply.

"We need to tell people how careful we are in our treatment of downer cows," she said about this emotionally charged topic.

"Cows are our business, and we need to look at what we do and be beyond reproach," she said.

The top five winners out of 21 winners of the Jacob M. Brunges production contest were:

Melanie Dietrich was the top finalist in the senior division of the junior achievement awards. She will compete in the national competition in the fall, said Betsy Dupuis, youth advisor of the organization.

Dietrich also was awarded a $200 scholarship.

Other winners in the senior division were Michelle Dugan, Watsontown; Michael Lydic, Marion Center; Pamela McConnell, Volant, and Joy Vance, Mt. Pleasant.

Winners in the junior division were Emily Dietrich, Newburg, Roberta McConnell, Volant, and Michelle Proctor, Waterford.

Star Point Andy Allusion, a June heifer owned by John and Cindy Batchelder, sold for the highest amount at $975. She is a daughter of Fairweather Andy out of a Valley Stream Silver Beacon daughter. Her line dates back to Top Brass daughter, which sold for more than $10,000 in a Heron Run dispersal.

Star Point was bought by Timelss Syndicate, Keymar, Md.

Two calves sold for $800. The first one was Irish Creek Top Seasons, a December calf owned by David and Robin Phillips, Mohrsville R.D. 1, who hosted the auction. She is a daughter of Molly Brook Brass Top and her maternal line goes back to Irish Creek EHV Noble Maria.

Harold Dice of Fredericksburg purchased this calf.

The other one was Irish Creek Lester Shamrock, born March 17, and owned by the Phillips'. Her sire is Highland Duncan Lester, the top bull of the breed.

Lester Martin of Pleasant Valley Jerseys in Chambersburg consigned Pleasant Valley Marshal Rea, which sold for $700. Martin donated half of that to the cattle club's scholarship fund.

Doris Houck of Peachbottom donated numerous craft items for sale, and Dennis Wagner of Shoemakersville, Berks County, was the auctioneer.

Robin Phillips said they had the best turnout yet — about 200 buyers — for the sale of the best calves they could find.

"There was a big demand," she said. "We had more buyers than calves."

She noted that Scott Youse of Oley, a Delaware Valley College student, professionally fit all of the calves before the sale.

"The consigners were delighted," she said.

All proceeds of the calf sale and the crafts exhibited will cover the costs of transporting state winners to the national show in Louisville, Ky., in November.

Check Conservation Plan Now

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The beginning of a new year signals that spring planting is near.

Randy McCormack, district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in Berks County, said the winter months are the ideal time for farmers to check their conservation plan to decide which practices must be installed this year.

Under the 1985 and 1990 Farm Bills, farmers must implement their conservation plan by Jan. 1, 1995 to remain eligible for most U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) farm program benefits.

"Staying in compliance means staying on schedule", said McCormack. "It means applying the practices that are called for in the conservation plan each year."

Most conservation plans outline a specific crop rotation or crop residue management method designed to reduce soil erosion on highly erodible cropland. If the farmer does not follow the plan, he or she may lose benefits such as commodity price supports, agricultural conservation program payments, disaster payments and Farmers Home Administration loans.

Crop residue management is one of the practices that require planning, McCormack said.

This winter is the best time for farmers to evaluate their tillage plans for spring. The type of tillage equipment and sequence of tillage operations will affect the amount of surface residue left at planting.

McCormack said about 80 to 85 percent of the conservation plans in the county include crop residue management.

Robert Heidecker, state resource conservationist for SCS in Harrisburg, said farmers who have difficulty implementing their plan because of special circumstances such as weather conditions, changes in the farm operations or increased herd size, should contact SCS.

Contact your Soil Conservation Service office early for an appointment to review your plan and schedule assistance.

Spring Calf Sale Holds Promise

The top selling calf of the fifth annual Spring Promise Calf Sale held at the Lebanon Fairgrounds is this registered Brown Swiss calf, Meadow Hill Emory Dinah-ET. Consigned by Gary Mase, center, it was purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Zartman of Ephrata for their son Thomas Jr. to raise as a project animal. The Zartman's paid $1,550 for the March 3-born calf. The calf suckles the fingers of Garrett Mase, Gary's son. Auctioneer Harry Bachman, of Annville, stands in the back left. The sale raised a total of $24,850 on 36 lots with an average price of $690 per animal. The sale was started in 1988 to provide a local outlet where youth could buy some of the area's top quality project calves to raise for 4-H and FFA projects and to show.

FAIR WEEK FOR FIELDWORK: Warm weather across the commonwealth improved conditions for field work. A significant storm system moved through the northwest corner of the state, bringing high winds and heavy rainfall. The rest of the state received below normal rainfall. Our respondents indicated that four days were suitable for field work. Activities included hauling manure, spreading fertilizer, maintaining machinery, spring plowing, planting, and caring for livestock.

SOIL MOISTURE: Pennsylvania's top soil moisture was rated short by 22 percent of our respondents, adequate by 74 percent, and surplus by four percent. Twenty-six percent of our respondents in the northern region rated soil moisture as short and 74 percent rated it adequate. In the central region, 20 percent of our reporters rated soil moisture as short, 72 percent rated it adequate, and eight percent rated it surplus. In the southern region, 20 percent of the respondents rated top soil as surplus in moisture, 76 percent judged it to be adequate, and four percent called it surplus.

POTATOES: Two percent of the potato acreage was planted according to our indications. This is 13 percentage points behind last year's 15 percent and 10 percentage points off the five-year average of 12 percent.

BARLEY AND WHEAT: All of the barley and wheat crops were still in the preboot state of development. Last year all of the wheat and 99 percent of the barley was preboot. One percent of the barley was in the boot stage at this time last year. The wheat crop across the state was rated 11 percent excellent, 51 percent good, 30 percent fair, and 8 percent poor.

Poultry Bronchitis Action Under Way

GEORGETOWN, Del. — In recent weeks, a new strain of infectious poultry bronchitis has been reported on the Delmarva peninsula.

This bronchitis has resulted in increased mortality on poultry farms and increased condemnations at processing plants. Seven of Delmarva's eight poultry companies have had flocks infected by this variant strain of respiratory illness.

The virus can be easily carried from farm to farm by people and equipment and can be carried by the wind up to two miles. While this virus affects chickens, there is no threat to consumers of poultry.

Because of the serious economic consequences this bronchitis can have on Delmarva, an industry-wide plan of action has begun. The effort is being coordinated by Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association for the local poultry industry. A program is under way to collect blood samples from chickens from throughout the peninsula to determine the spread of the virus and to learn its characteristics. These samples and the virus from infected flocks will be used to develop a vaccine.

Because of the easily spread nature of this virus, biosecurity in all segments of the poultry industry is being increased. Suppliers and service personnel who might normally travel to poultry farms are being asked to curtail their visits. Poultry growers are being asked to keep unauthorized persons from going onto their property. Growers should avoid contact with other growers. Equipment must not be shared among growers. Poultry house doors should be posted with "Do Not Enter" signs.

Delmarva's poultry companies are increasing the biosecurity they practice, including limiting on-the-farm contact with growers and restricting motor vehicle traffic.

The poultry industry response is being handled by DPI's Emergency Poultry Disease Task Force, chaired by Dr. G. Thomas Holder, director of Avian Health, Allen's Hatchery, Inc.

"All persons in the poultry industry and those having dealings with our industry need to be alert to this poultry health problem," said Holder. "We all must work together to contain this virus."

DPI's task force consists of poultry company representatives, growers, veterinarians from the departments of agriculture, university researchers, and personnel from poultry pharmaceutical companies.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative Holds Regional Issues Meeting

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

BIRD-IN-HAND (Lancaster Co.) — After a year hiatus, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative recently resumed holding issues meetings with leaders of the communities and agribusinesses within the region served by the cooperative.

On Tuesday, at Bird-in-Hand Restaurant, in Bird-in-Hand, a group of people representing a variety of agricultural interests met to discuss agricultural and animal rights issues and to learn more about the cooperative.

In addition to ADC directors, those attending represented interests which ranged from legislative, media, dairy production, and agricultural retail and wholsesale businesses, and non-agricultural businesses.

Laura England, public relations manager for ADC, said that meetings have been or are scheduled to be held within various regions in the ADC territory.

The break in holding the meetings came after years of doing so.

Dr. Lowell Wilson, professor of animal science at Penn State University, discussed animal rights issues, activists and his experiences and thoughts concerning the direction and future of the movement.

Wilson and Dr. Mary Beth Bennett, also at Penn State, put together a slide presentation to help the public understand the differences between animal rights, animal welfare and animal agriculture.

The three topics represent a spectrum of philosophical consideration toward animals, according to Wilson.

He said that animal rights people are those people who believe that all animal life is equal in importance and priority. He said that one group promotes that philosophy with a saying that equates the value of life equally to animals — such as a rat, hog and dog — and humans.

Animal welfarists, he said, are those who are concerned with the care and treatment of animals. They are not necessarily against owning pets or using animals for human needs.

Animal agriculturalists are those who believe that humans are dependent on using animals.

Wilson talked about certain activist group activities, such as the destruction of laboratory research facilities, equipment and research data, which amounts to the loss of years of work, valuable information, and an unspecified, but large amount of money.

Wilson said the activists are apparently talking about targeting domestic farming practices next, and have been protesting certain factions of agriculture; some of which need to be more self-policing in ensuring unusual circumstances do not occur which cause undo suffering or stress to domestic animals.

According to the animal science professor, he enjoys talking to groups of animal activists to hear what complaints they have.

He said that it has been his experience that the majority of those who are members of extremist groups are not fully aware of the positions of their organizations or have enough information to know what kind of treatment agricultural animals really get and why some things are done.

Animal rightists are almost exclusively vegetarians, Wilson said. They maintain that humans do not need to eat animal flesh in order to grow and be healthy. "They're right," Wilson said.

Nutritionists have long held that vegetarianism is possible, but requires careful meal preparation, because in order for humans to be able to use plant proteins the same way, they must combine a variety of nuts, beans or other sources of plant protein in order to get the full complement of essential amino acids.

Amino acids are the building blocks of proteins. If just one amino acid is missing, all the other protein components can not be used by the human as protein.

However, animal flesh provides the full complement of usable proteins for humans and can easily satisfy the protein requirements for greater numbers of people.

But even those who consider themselves animal rightists apparently don't consider that animal labor is the primary world energy source for the production of plants such as rice, the most important grain in the world.

The majority of rice is grown in rice paddies in underindustrialized countries. Without the use of the water buffalo for planting and harvesting rice, the yields would be catastrophic.

Wilson said there are certain areas within the animal agriculture industry which do need attention and change, such as dealing with down animals.

However, he said that leaders of animal rights and many welfare groups are spreading misinformation about animal agriculture to their members. He said that is the real problem.

Therefore, Wilson said that those in agriculture should not develop an intolerance toward the uninformed, but to practice patience and make every attempt to teach about the industry.

The meeting included a presentation of new fluid milk radio advertising, the approval of an advertising contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and a description of the program's fall cheese campaign.

James Moser, account executive for D'Arcy, Masius, Benton and Bowles, presented the new fluid milk radio commercials that follow the television-advertising theme of, "You're Not a Kid Anymore."

The commercials are titled "Act Your Age," "Far Side," and "It's How You Feel." The advertisements will air in five Pennsylvania media markets, Pittsburgh, Johnstown/Altoona, Scranton-Wilkes Barre, Erie, and Harrisburg/Lancaster/Lebanon/York, throughout the remainder of 1992.

The advertising campaign is being coordinated through a joint partnership between the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Mid East United Dairy Industry Association/F.O. 36 Advertising Agency, and the PDPP.

The commercials, collectively titled. "Act Your Age," scored the highest persuasive appeal among older target listeners and women. The advertisements are targeted to baby boomers, consumers ages 25 to 49, who represent 38 percent of the population.

In addition to the fluid milk program, the board approved an advertising package with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

For the package, dairy advertisements will air on the Pirates Radio Network for every home and away game.

Jay Bell, the Pirate's shortstop, will return as an industry spokesperson for the PDPP, by making several milk commercials and promotional appearances during the season. The package also includes a special Dairy Day promotion at the Pirates' Three Rivers Stadium.

A fall cheese campaign was also discussed at the PDPP meeting.

During the fall, the PDPP will join promotion partners, ADADC and Mid East UDIA, to cooperate on a retail incentive promotion. The partners will work to increase the number of in-store cheese displays in grocery stores throughout the state.

In-store promotional campaigns have been proven to increase cheese sales by nearly 30 percent over a promotion period. The promotion will also feature special television and radio advertising coordinated through a national campaign.

The PDPP board will meet again on July 28 and 29, in Meadville, Crawford County. Dairy farmers are encouraged to attend a special promotional program on July 28.

Delaware Century Farm

culturalist and gentleman farmer Thomas Rothwell (an England emigrant), the 1,725 square foot historical house was built circa 1770 and may soon be listed in the Register.

According to the owners, during the last 270 years, the farm, which includes some marshland, has produced small grains, vegetables, and maintained beef cattle.

But only in the last several years, because of its prime location, has the pressure been mounting to sell the land. Developers have sought after the owners to sell their rights — which the Smiths refuse to do.

In one instance, the family won a battle to prevent a Rt. 13 "relief route" that would have cut right through their farm.

Construct roadway

According to S.R., the housing developments near the farm, including Sycamore Farms and others, thought that because of the open land available, it would be a fine place to construct a roadway.

S.R. said many of the residents moved in from other, faraway areas, and he is angry that they are trying to tell them what to do.

"They thought that was a peachy idea," said S.R. "Who cares about wildlife? Who cares about history?" S.R. said the families in the housing development thought that "'hey, we're families, and we have 50 votes and you have one.' That's what they thought they were going to do."

S.R. said he blames politics for the fact they've had to battle the developers.

Burned us up

"One man said, I've lived here a year," said Gail Smith. "That really burned us up, because, well, if you've lived here for a number of years, you'll finally have lived here for as long as the farm has been here."

S.R. recalls another who claimed rights to making policy for the area. "He said he'd been here six years," said S.R. "I said, well, guess what, buddy, you're 276 years too late, you know. He didn't like it. He didn't care. It didn't make any difference to him.

"(I told him) you came to us. We were always here. We've always been here, we've always been doing this.

"Originally, somebody thought it would be a great place for a golf course," said S.R. "There's been all kinds of speculation on what they might do and not do.

Chews me up

"But that's what just chews me up," said S.R. "Don't tell me to move. I've been here. You move."

Gail Smith and her family, as are many farms in the area, are threatened by increasing development. S.R. said the cities are swallowing up small communities such as Middletown. "Middletown will look like Newark is now, and Newark will just be swallowed up by Wilmington. It's all going to be just a big mess here after a while," he said. "It's a shame."

Hill Island Farm has a rich heritage. Founded circa 1720 by agriculturalist and gentleman farmer Thomas Rothwell (an England emigrant), the 1,725 square foot historical house was built circa 1770 and may soon be listed in the "National Register of Historic Places." Standing here is owner S. Rodmond "S.R." Smith III. Photo by Andy Andrews.

Hill Island Farm has weathered a lot of storms — a tornado which touched down in June 1988 just scraped by the old homestead. S.R. Smith points to a corner of the facer panel in back of the house which was pulled out "wide enough to put your hand through," he said.

S.R. Smith has also worked to put in place a wide array of conservation practices, as he said, to "manage the water."

Smith said her family will continue to uphold the tradition and keep the farm in the family. She said the developers "look at us when we say, 'No, it's not for sale,' as if, well, how much money is it going to take for you to sell? It's not for sale."

All of the 266 tillable acres are in corn, which the business markets locally. In all, S.R. has been successful in obtaining good yields (about 90 bushels per acre on the average), despite last year's drought. S.R. has also worked to put in place a wide array of conservation practices, as he said, to "manage the water."

Make changes

S.R. was awarded the district's conservation farmer of the year honor in 1990. But he said he continues to make changes to improve the profitability and the quality of the land. He has installed grass waterways, rip-rap, and employs minimum or no-till techniques to conserve the soil and to more properly manage the water.

If only the developers would keep away from them, according to S.R.

"To a developer, it's just something to put houses on," he said. "But when you go out there, you work it, the planter breaks down and you're out there, you're sweating, you're cutting your knuckles all up, you're worried about drought, it means something to you. It's your livelihood."

S.R. said he makes a living off the land. "We don't make it in stocks and bonds that sit around, or sell cars," he said. "And the better you treat the land, the better you keep the land, the better it's going to come back for you."

Always something

S.R. said he employs new conservation techniques nearly every year. "You always have to do something." he said.

S.R. said he enjoys working the land a lot more than sitting at a desk. But he emphasized the importance of marketing and learning how to achieve the best price for your farm product.

But often nature doesn't cooperate. "Nature can go against you," he said. "You can do everything and have your pH and everything fine, and if you can't get the corn, you can't get the corn."

The farm, said S.R., is "something that has been passed down and everybody passed it down" through generations. "They made something better out of it.

"We don't want it for houses," he said. "I mean, this is something that means something. I would love to have it go down to my children. That's the idea. They're not making land anymore. You know that.

"Once (developers) pave it up, or put whatever they put on it, it's gone. Forever."

Despite The Farmer's Hours

ing operation, the ground just isn't available around here. And it's priced very high."

When you work this close with people, funny things happen. Once a turkey took a liking to the diamand on Joan's wedding ring. And a dog once ran off with some of the sample bottles. The cats around the barn also sometimes get in the way of progress and put paw marks on the barn sheets.

And once in a snow storm, unknown to Joan, Harold followed her to her farm appointment to work to be sure she arrived safely. Joan got to her destination OK, but Harold later got stuck on the way to his farm and had to walk to work.

Through the years, though, what has kept the Probsts going is their love for their farmers and the love for cows.

"It's a pleasant task to work with the kind of people we do," Joan said. "We like to see the farmers' cows do well as much as the farmers do. You learn to watch the good cows and then to see if their cow families do well too."

"As far as our DHIA directors go," Harold adds, "they have been very good to us. We have never needed to ask for a raise. In fact, one year they offered us a raise, we didn't take it because it was a bad year for the dairymen, and milk prices were going down. Leadership has always been good in Lancaster County."

Would Joan and Harold choose the same "farmer's hours" if they had a chance to start over again?

"Yes, I'm sure I would," Harold said. "In a way, you do the same thing each day, but you also go to a different farm. I have always found it interesting."

Joan agrees. "I'm glad Harold would do it again, because that's how I met him," Joan said. "And besides, our heart is in our work."

TRY A LITTLE TENDERNESS

Bulk-handling systems were developed for one primary reason: greater efficiency in larger operations. But sometimes, bulk-handling can mean rough-handling.

That's why your Unverferth dealer is your one-stop source for a complete line of bulk-handling equipment that treats seed and grain with kid gloves. Our unique auger with brush-flighting, for example, is ideal for movement of beans and other delicate seeds. The compact bristles produce a gentle sweeping action at the flight edge which smoothly conveys seed into the planter and limits varietal contamination.

Brush-flighting is also available as an option on Unverferth's 6-inch truck and grain box augers that serve your planting and harvesting needs.

In fact, for all your bulk-handling system needs, see your Unverferth dealer today. Because a little tenderness can take you a long way.

DHIA Names Smith Farm

Dave said he continues to get occassional requests to sell off lots for residential construction, but turns them down quickly.

Just west of the State Game Lands and the Smith farm, the roofs and exteriors of homes reflect through the naked branches of a winter forest.

During summer days, with the homes hidden under a thick canopy, the area deceptively resembles the way the valley was when Smith grew up.

At that time, there were few artificial lights glowing across the night landscape. Each light signaled a farm. The stars were more visible.

Alcoa built a plant nearby years ago and had bought up several farms surrounding the plant. The majority of the Alcoa land is leased for crop production.

Many of the farms further west in the valley sold off lots for businesses and homes.

Toward Schaefferstown, a number of the farms also sold off lots for residential clusters, but farms still hold out in the area.

However, today, except for small pockets such as the Smith farm, the night landscape looks like a thick, tangled string of distasteful Christmas lights.

If Smith doesn't feel he deserves any special recognition for his herd's dramatic production improvement in one year, perhaps the couple should get an award merely for making an effort to start farming in the area.

Dave, a 1975 graduate of Cedar Crest High School, said that while he was growing up, he never felt different from others in school just because his father was farming.

In some cases, parents who own small businesses make their children become integral to the business operations.

Helping out and doing chores aside, some small family businesses actually depend on the children working in a part-time or full-time capacity before or after school.

Those children frequently miss out on being able to participate in extracurricular activities such as sports and school clubs.

But Dave said that wasn't the case with his family. He said he did his chores. But he was not completely denied the ability to interact with his childhood peers.

In school, Dave said he pursued an academic course of study, tentatively planning to go to college.

However, he said that since he really didn't have a collegiate goal and he hadn't decided what he wanted to do in life, he went to work off of his father's farm.

"In high school I had no intention of farming," Dave said.

After graduation, he worked for seven years for Hoffman Seeds Inc., in Landisville. That's when he met Kathy.

The two got married and decided to dairy farm. They started by renting the farm from his father and paying off the grade Holstein herd they bought and other essentials for starting.

Then in 1990, they began buying the farm.

The farm is barely visible from

Rt. 419, also known as Schaeffer Road (Schaefferstown Road to locals). The three silos and barn roof peek up over a gently rolling ridge that is cropped in corn, soybeans, and alfalfa-orchard grass.

A Wengert's dairy sign is at the farm lane entrance and the gravel lane leads back several hundred yards to a small protected bowl of land. The barn and farmhouse are on the southern face of the hill.

Dave sells to Wengert's mainly because his father sold to Wengert's Dairy Inc.

A strong spring which drains the mountain feeds two watering troughs on the Smith farm — one near the farm house, that gets used considerably by the family's dog, the other is part of the fence system for the barnyard.

With the woods and State Game Lands and two public fishing lakes within walking distance, Kathy and the children — Tabitha, 6, and Daniel, 2 — have a place to explore and take hikes together.

The barn, which was renovated in 1964, has 38 tie-stalls. Dave said the milking herd averages about 43 cows over the course of the year. He raises his own replacements.

Dave wasn't involved with 4-H or FFA, but that makes him no less qualified to farm. He said he enjoys cropping and dairy work.

"I don't prefer any work over another. I tell people I get just as much satisfaction from getting 175 bushels of corn as I do getting 25,000 pounds of milk. I like it all."

He said that if he had started a dairy herd as a youth, as many do while growing up on a dairy farm, he may have developed a registered herd.

But with the initial investment required, it is too late to think about that, he said. The course of farming for the young couple is to take it one step at a time, as they can afford it.

Dave said the next long-range goal he's considering is constructing a new calf-raising facility.

But the couple said their overall plan is to farm well and live with the focus of maintaining a healthy family life; to keep active and healthy (Kathy runs in local fun events and works out during the week.), and to expand the operation only as the pocket book dictates.

Kitchen Kapers Showcase

Food, Flowers, Decorating Ideas

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Food, flowers, and decorating tips are a great combination to interest homemakers everywhere.

If you are searching for ideas to serve food, decorate, or plan your landscaping, be sure to participate in the Kitchen Kaper Tulip Tour on Monday, April 27, from 9:30 a.m. until 2:00 p.m.

Seven homes in the Ephrata area will be open for your inspection. In each kitchen, a chef will serve a specialty from the restaurant that he or she represents. In addition, local florists will arrange floral displays inside and outside each home.

One of the homes featured on the tour is the Kimmell House Bed and Breakfast owned by Harold and Margaret Althouse.

Harold purchased the three-story Georgian-style sandstone farmhouse about 25 years ago. The house, built in 1795 by Jacob and Esther Kimmell who were householders of the Ephrata Cloister, was built when George Washington was president. The original stately house had deteriorated and was slated to be torn down until Althouse rescued it because he felt "it was terrible to destroy a 1795 house."

Althouse is an architect, who when he purchased the house was widowed with three children. But before the house was restored, he married Margaret (Maggie) who was also widowed and had two daughters.

"I had cats; he had a dog, and our children ranged in ages between 7 and 18 years old. We managed somehow to get along quite well while we restored the house," Maggie said.

Historians have not been able to discern why the house has two separate date stones in the front of the house. Maggie likes to imagine that perhaps Esther Kimmel was a woman's libber and insisted that her name appear as prominent as her husband Jacob's name.

Be a legal snooper. Participate in the Kitchen Kaper "Tulip Tour" of homes on April 27, and tour seven homes including this Kimmell House Bed and Breakfast in Ephrata.

John Davenport, executive chef of the Black Horse, serves crab soup to Maggie Althouse who operates the Kimmell House Bed and Breakfast. Davenport and other chefs will serve food specialties at each of the homes open for inspection.

Harold and Maggie Althouse delight in sharing stories about the history of their three-story farmhouse that was built when George Washington was President.

The exterior shutters of the house are original and were retrieved from a burn pile, where, fortunately, only two were partially destroyed.

The Althouses worked hard to return the house to its original appearance. Since it had been turned into a two-family home during its demise, the Althouses needed to change one of the two front doors into a window.

Some of the work they encountered during this transition included unboarding two fireplaces where the skeleton remains of many animals were found. Many of the windows were broken but those unbroken were salvaged and inserted into newly-made window frames.

The large kitchen with dining area features custom cherry cabinets. Of special interest is an original built-in cupboard with butterfly shelves. There is also an Indian door with a sliding wooden panel that slides over the glass in the door to provide protection from the Indians, who frequented the stream area in back of the house in the 1700s.

The home has handsome oak floors with splints in the center. The deep windows have raised panel woodwork and those in the front of the house have decorative insets at the top.

The rooms are painted in original colors that a painter uncovered and matched.

The Althouses have many heirlooms and antiques inherited from Harold's parents who had operated a country store and gas station in Hinkletown.

The original artwork in each room of the house was painted by a daughter who graduated from the York Academy of Art.

Maggie said, "After the children left home, the house was too quiet." Consequently, the Althouses opened their home as a bed and breakfast about three years ago. As a former home economist, Maggie delights in preparing huge country breakfasts for the guests. Unlike many bed and breakfast operations, the Althouses love children and welcome them as overnight guests. "I often hold the baby while the parents are eating and that keeps everyone happy," she said.

"Guests want us to say this house is haunted," Maggie said. "But it isn't. The noises they hear are things like squirrels jumping from the Powlonis tree to the roof."

Maggie said that she would love to screen in the back porch that overlooks a creek and woodland, but, she said, "My husband is a purist and he said that no one had screened-in porches in the 1700s."

Guests can enjoy seeing this historical home and sample crab soup and fresh vegetables with dip prepared by Jonathan H. Davenport, executive chef at the Black Horse Inn, Rt. 272 Denver. Davenport especially enjoys food garnishing and will display numerous vegetable carvings to show what can be done with garnish and color.

Royer's Flower Shop, Inc. will provide the floral decorations.

Other homes open for inspection include the following:

• Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Schmuck, 419 Countryside Drive, Ephrata. The unique saltbox-style home built in 1988 was designed with a mix of styles and ideas focusing on traditional and French country with a soft contemporary touch. The custom cherry wood kitchen features an island providing additional counter space for entertaining. A chef from Holiday Inn will be serving a specialty. The florist will be from Foster's Flowers in Akron.

• Mr. and Mrs. C. Lee Zinn, Hill Rd., Denver, will open their enlarged Cape Cod style home trimmed in Williamsburg red. The home overlooks trees, fields, and Zinn's Park. The kitchen and dining area is filled with antique kitchen utensils, a washstand, and blue jugs. In the family room, a Christmas tree with more than 500 ornaments remains up all year. The chef from Zinn's Diner will serve rivel soup. The florist will be from Country Lane in Denver.

• Mr. and Mrs. Mark Schillaci of 227 Mason Drive, Ephrata. This two-story Victorian-style home has a marble walk and marble porch. Kitchen cabinets of birch with a white-washed finish contribute to a light, airy feeling. The kitchen opens into the family room, which overlooks the deck. The chef will be Terese Zaleski of Cake a la Carte, Akron. The house will be decorated by Country Charm House of Leola.

• Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Witmer, 257 Mason Drive, Ephrata. This new home in the Brickyard is of contemporary style. The kitchen with light oak cabinets has a dining area with French doors opening onto the deck. The kitchen and dining area open into a great room, featuring a cathedral ceiling and fireplace. Akron Restaurant will provide a food specialty. Ephrata Flower Shop will provide floral decorations.

• Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Zimmerman of 234 Stephen Lane, Ephrata. This two-story colonial home is replete with Judy's collections of teddy bears, antique crocks, and Japanese geisha girl china. The kitchen with walnut cabinets is open to a breakfast room containing an antique wooden ice box and many old tin containers. The Nav Jiwan Tea Room, Ephrata, will serve one of their specialties. The florist is Oberholtzer's Greenhouse, Brickerville.

• Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Esbenshade of 619 E. 28th Division Highway. This 13-room farmhouse is more than 120 years old. The kitchen has a walk-in brick fireplace and a nine-foot butcher block in the center with cabinets on one side and seating stools on the other side. Since they own Esbenshade Greenhouse, Inc., they will display their own flowers indoors and extensive outdoor landscaping with flowers. Sample food will be provided by Reflections and Portofino Restaurants.

The tour is sponsored by the Woman's Club of Ephrata. In conjunction with the tour, craft items from local artisans and recipes from various chefs will be for sale.

Tickets are $6 in advance and $7 on the day of the tour to be sold at the Ephrata Church of the Brethren, 201 Crescent Avenue, Ephrata. For advance tickets, send a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to Mrs. Evelyn Wolf, 94 Second Ave., Ephrata, Pa. 17522 or call (717) 733-6835.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

The clumps are back.

Green and lush, they do the lawn at random spots, lending it the rough ragged look it always has before that first equalizing pass of the lawnmower.

I adore a smooth, green meticulous, velvety-looking lawn. Generally I adore tham at someone else's place.

That's because ours isn't . . . never has been . . . never will be. My charachter endurance is not that great, nor do I possess the single-minded determination necessary to create picture perfection in grass. Nor the time.

Plus I happen to admire dandelions, white clover and yes (horrors) even crabgrass. Such spunky, durable species are preferable to bare spots - and at a distance, who knows? Or cares?

Back to the clumps. Why they thrive where they do on our lawn is primarily related to where generations of heifers with no respect for fences or gates have dashed through over the years, leaving behind souvenirs of the fertilizing sort. Over and around those sites, the grass grows with vim and vigor unmatched.

Weekly mowings will lessen the raggedness. But at this particular season, those ratty-looking clumps provide dual-purpose benefits.

Tall clumps of lush, green grass offer the ideal hiding place for Easter eggs. What more perfect spot could there be for a bunny to tuck in with care a pink or blue or striped or spotted symbol of the season?

Second purpose for those clumps is to "harvest" them. For dinner. Bunny Dinner.

Easter season one year ago blessed this household with a pair of young rabbits, gift to our youngest from a special friend. Ben (the female - honest) and Norman were soon settled in a moveable, outdoor bunny condo, an architectural design of wooden hutch with attached wire run.

Sadly, a few weeks after their arrival, we discovered that the wire run was not attached adequately. Skunk, our resident, come-and-go, senior tomcat, found a loose corner in the wire and acted upon his well-honed hunting instincts.

Norman II arrived to a tighter apartment. That is, until after several weeks of nibbling on the grass clumps, salad leftovers, and alfalfa pellets grew fat, furry adult bunnies with long, sharp toenails. Toenails that could dig tunnels right out under the wire sides.

These bunnies weren't only fast growing, but just plain down fast.

At first, they were easy to catch and retreive as they loped around the lawn and took refuge under the protective shelter of the three-wheeler. But after a couple of simple escaped-rabbit retrievals, the bunnies "smartened" up.

One morning, heather-gray colored Ben was simply nowhere to be found. The major tunneling culprit, Ben would make her escape and head for the bushes. We hunted through them. Through the flower beds. In the grasses near the willow tree outside the dairy barn. No Ben.

Having watched our too-tame local fox make rounds in the yard in broad daylight, we feared the worst. Norman III, meanwhile, seemed lonely without his companion.

Two evenings later, ben turned up, casually nibbling grass on the lawn.

After a couple of such hare hide-n-seek rounds, the architect went back to the drawing board for a more secure and even larger abode. Call it hutch overkill - two of us could barely lift the thing to move it inside the shelter of the bank barn when cold weather arrived.

Rabbits being rabbits, we eventaully had nine of the little furry critters. Before those rabbits became more rabbits, all but three of the total were dispersed - Ben and two of her daughters.

With warmest weather, it's time for two of us to drag - literally - the buny abode back outside. No sense wasting those thick, lush clumps of grass.

Just as soon as the last, lost Easter egg turns up.

Milk, Light Don't Mix

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Milk in clear plastic jugs is susceptible to off-flavors and vitamin loss caused by exposure to light, says a specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Milk stored in these containers and exposed to light can develop a tallowy, woody or cardboard-like taste," says Sidney E. Barnard, professor of food science. "This chemical off-flavor develops during exposure to as little as 20 minutes of direct sunlight or 24 hours of fluorescent light at intensities above 100 foot candles."

This flavor change is accompanied by a decrease in the milk's nutiitional properties. "Exposure to light causes a loss of vitamin A and riboflavin," Barnard says. "The amount lost and the intensity of the flavor change is determined by the intensity and nearness of the light source and the length of exposure."

Of 273 samples purchased at Pennsylvania stores in 1990 and 1991, more than 53 percent had a pronounced light-induced flavor. The incidence of flavor change in paper containers was less than 3 percent, with most cases occurring in pints and half pints purchased from supermarkets.

In consumer-preference studies conducted at Penn State, 82 percent of 351 participants preferred milk without these flavor changes. "Milk with a definite light-induced flavor is objectionable to many people, especially children," Barnard says.

Practical solutions to the flavor change and loss of vitamins have been known since the late 1960s. "Dark-colored paper containers and jugs made of plastic containing light-blocking agents such as talcum powder and titanium dioxide provide the most protection," Barnard says. "Orange-colored shields on fluorescent lights also have been used effectively in the dairy cases of some stores.

"A similar problem exists with orange juice," Barnard says. "Major orange juice processors have used pure white or colored half-gallon plastic containers for nearly two years to prevent vitamin C loss and off-flavors.

"However, the dairy industry has been slower to adopt the use of these new containers," Barnard says. "Only six fluid milk processing plants in the United States are using pigmented plastic jugs, including one in Pennsylvania."

To get children to drink the milk they need for bone development and good health, Barnard suggests purchasing milk in other than translucent plastic containers. "Paper containers or pigmented plastic jugs where available are the only containers that prevent off-flavor development and loss of vitamins from milk purchased in stores," he says.

THIS MAY BE YOUR ANSWER TO: Heart Problems, High Blood Pressure, Poor Circulation, Arthritis, Diabetes, Leg Cramps, Numbness, Tingling, Cold Hands And Feet & Atherosclerosis.

Dear Golden Pride:
A lady told me about Green Barley and that it was good for arthritis. I got one bottle...I am now on the second bottle. I discovered I did not need my cane anymore. I had used a cane for 18 months. I had a back operation in June 1990 and a hip replacement in Jan. 91...People asked what I was doing, I told them I was taking Green Barley, they said get me some. I never dreamed I would be selling this product. In 3 months I sold to 103 different people, all because they saw the difference it made for me.

W.T. Lowmaster

I'm 70 years old, I have never felt better.
Before taking Golden Pride Bee Pollen, Propolis, Formula #1 and 76 Plus, I had problems with nerves, high blood pressure, diabetes, and angina.
I have been on the above mentioned. The last visit to my doctor he said; "Jake, you have a clean bill of health. You don't have to come back to see me unless you need to. Right not you are fine."
My weight has come down. I weighed 205 lbs. in March, 1985. I now weigh 184. I cut out all nerve pills, I eat good and sleep good. I love what Golden Pride has done for me.

Sincerley, Jake Tate

Before beginning to use Formula #7, Bee III, I conducted tests for my cholesterol level. I tested at 265. After one month's usage of Formula #7, Bee III, I returned to have my cholesterol checked again. It dropped to 195. That's 70 points in 30 days! I made no dietary changes and only added Formula #7, Bee III to my diet. A beneficial side effect was that I lost 10 pounds!

Have You Heard?

THE BREAKFAST CEREAL CHALLENGE

Have you ever wondered how many teaspoons of sugar are in your breakfast cereal? You probably have no idea because the sugar content of sugar is listed in grams. Reading the nutritional labeling information on cereal boxes may look like a challenge to you, however you can easily learn how to do it.

On the side of cereal boxes is a label which contains the words "Carbohydrate Information." Under this heading is a line stating "sucrose or (fructose) and other sugars." This line tells you how much sugar is in one serving of your favorite cereal. Here is an example from the cereal Cap'n Crunch.

Cereal (without milk)
One serving (3/4 cup) 1 oz.
Calories per serving 120
CARBOHYDRATE INFORMATION
Starch and related carbohydrates 12 grams
Sucrose and other sugars 12 grams
Total carbohydrates 24 grams

As you can see from this example, a 3/4 cup serving of Cap'n Crunch has 12 grams of sugar. How many teaspoons of sugar are there in 12 grams? It is important to know one fact: four grams of sugar equals one teaspoon. To determine the number of teaspoons of sugar in one serving of Cap'n Crunch, divide 12 grams by four. The answer is 3 teaspoons of sugar. Is that how much sugar you would add if you started out with one serving of unsweetened cereal? Furthermore, most of us eat two or three "servings" of cereal in our bowl. Therefore, the amount of sugar in our bowl is doubled or tripled.

Many nutritionists and dentists recommend that you choose cereals that contain six grams or less of sugar per serving. Six grams equals one and one-half teaspoons of sugar.

As an exception to the rule, cereals which contain dried fruit, such as Raisin Bran, may have up to 10 grams of sucrose and other sugars and still be acceptable. Dried fruit contributes about four grams of naturally occurring sugar in addition to several vitamins, minerals, and fiber.

Some cereals are sweetened with NutraSweet in order to reduce the sugar content. If you follow the guidelines of choosing cereals with six or fewer grams of sugar per serving, you have a choice of more than 40 breakfast cereals which do not contain NutraSweet and are low in sugar.

The next time you are in the supermarket, compare the labels on cereal boxes. Which one will you choose?

Feed A Crowd

Cooking for a crowd does not need to be hard if you plan ahead and if you know the amounts needed to serve large numbers of guests. Refer to the chart on this page that will help you decide how much food you need.

Most recipes can be adapted to large groups by multiplying each ingredient by the number needed to serve your guests. But remember, cooking times will need to be adjusted for large amounts made in the oven.

Whenever possible, make food ahead of time, especially items such as macaroni salad and baked goods. Also, try to delegate others to lighten your work load by having them prepare a dish at home and bring it along.

POTATOES FOR A CROWD

2 pounds frozen hash browns
½ cup diced onions
10¾ -ounce cream of chicken soup
1 stick butter, melted
1 cup sour cream
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
¾ teaspoon salt, optional
⅛ teaspoon pepper, optional
1 cup crushed potato chips, optional

Let hash browns thaw approximately 1½ hours. Combine all ingredients except potato chips and pour into lightly greased 13x9-inch casserole. Sprinkle with crushed chips. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Makes 12 to 15 servings.

MOLASSES STICKY BUNS

¾ cup milk
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup butter
1 teaspoon salt
2 packages dry yeast
⅓ cup lukewarm water
1 egg
4 cups flour

Scald milk. Stir in sugar, ⅓ cup butter, and salt. Cool to lukewarm. Sprinkle yeast on lukewarm water; stir to dissolve. Add yeast, egg, and one cup sifted flour to milk mixture. Beat with electric mixer at medium speed until smooth (about 2 minutes).

Gradually add enough remaining flour to make a soft dough that leaves the sides of the bowl. Turn onto a lightly floured surface and knead until smooth, for about 8 to 10 minutes. Place in a lightly greased bowl; turn dough over to grease top. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled, about 1½ hours. Meanwhile, combine ¼ cup molasses, ½ cup brown sugar, and ½ cup butter. Heat until butter melts. Spread mixture in two-greased nine-inch round cake pans. Sprinkle with ½ cup walnuts or pecans in each pan.

Combine one cup brown sugar and one teaspoon ground cinnamon. Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a 12x8-inch rectangle. Sprinkle with half of brown sugar mixture. Roll up like a jelly roll; cut into 12 slices. Arrange in prepared pans. Let rise until doubled, about 1 hour. Bake in 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Invert pans on plates and remove pans. Cool. Makes 24 rolls.

QUESTION — B. M. Stoltzfus, Quarryville, would like to know how to make sour cream that has a smooth, not watery, texture like the store-bought variety.

ANSWER — Helen Myers, Dillsburg, wanted a recipe for turnip ice cream. Thanks to Hazel Spamer, Perry Hall, Md., who sent a recipe for turnip custard. It is not what was requested, but Helen thought that the recipe could be adapted to make ice cream since her mother makes ice cream from an egg custard recipe.

Turnip Custard

3 eggs
1½ cups grated raw turnip
3 cups milk, scalded
Salt, pepper, and nutmeg to taste
1 teaspoon grated onion
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon minced green pepper
3 tablespoons melted butter or margarine

Beat eggs slightly, stir in the grated turnip alternately with scalded milk. Season to taste with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Beat until foamy. Stir in remaining ingredients. Turn into buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with a little granulated sugar. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 45 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serve at once. Happy experimenting in adapting this recipe to ice cream.

ANSWER — N. Shonk, McAlisterville, wanted a recipe to make candied fruit such as cherries and pineapple. Thanks to Hazel Spamer, Perry Hall, Md., and to Eva Southard, Glen Rock, for sending a recipe.

Candied Fruit

Remove pits from cherries. Add enough water to cover the fruit in a saucepan. Use 3½ cups sugar to 1¾ cup liquid.

Simmer until much of the liquid is absorbed and fruit is transparent. Remove from liquid and cool.

Pineapple chunks and other fruit may be done in this way. If desired, add red or green food coloring to vary the color of the fruit.

Candied Fruit

To candy large fruits such as pineapples, quinces, and citron, wash, pare, and cut into slices or sections. Cook the fruit in water to cover until just tender. Drain off the juice. Put in an enamel or glass kettle:

4 cups sugar
⅔ cup light corn syrup
2 cups water

Heat mixture to boiling point, add prepared fruit. Cook until the fruit is nearly transparent. It is best not to crowd the fruit in the kettle, prepare 2 pounds at a time; put 8 to 10 pieces in the kettle at one time. It is also more satisfactory to do a single variety of fruit at a time. Lift the fruit from the syrup with a skimmer. Place it on waxed paper to dry. Dust with confectioners' sugar and let dry slowly in the open air or in a 250 degree oven. Sprinkle with more sugar if the fruit seems sticky. Cut in small pieces when dry for use in fruit cakes.

ANSWER — Naomi Hackman, Souderton, wanted a recipe for dill pickles that includes sugar in the recipe. Thanks to Hazel Spamer, Perry Hall, Md., writes to use a regular dill pickle recipe and add sugar to taste. She said that she often prepares pickles and then puts them into another type of pickle juice to altr the flavor more to her taste.

ANSWER — For Helen Myers, Dillsburg, who wanted to purchase an electric chicken plucker. Write to Noel Schlegel, 506 N. Main St., Topton, PA 19562 or call (215) 682-6713.

ANSWER — For Doug Sprinkle, Upperco, Md., who requested a recipe for Lemon Cream Cheese Pie, here are recipes sent in by Virginia Grove, Delta; Susan Mantz, New Ringgold, and by Mrs. Harold Diller.

Lemon Cream Cheese Pie

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
2 cups milk
1 package instant lemon pudding mix

Soften cream cheese with ¼ cup milk until smooth. Add instant pudding and remaining milk. Mix until smooth, pour into 8-inch prepared graham cracker crust. Sprinkle with a few graham cracker crumbs and refrigerate 2 hours before serving.

Lemon Pudding Cake

¾ cup sugar
¼ cup flour
Dash salt
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1½ teaspoons finely shredded lemon peel
¼ cup lemon juice
3 beaten egg yolks
1½ cups milk
3 egg whites

In large mixing bowl, combine sugar, flour, and salt. Stir in butter or margarine, lemon peel, and juice. In small bowl, combine egg yolks and milk; add to flour mixture. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold egg whites into flour mixture. Turn into ungreased 8x8x2-inch baking pan.

Place in larger baking pan or oven rack. Pour hot tap water into larger pan to the depth of 1 inch. Bake at 350 degrees until top is golden brown and cake springs back and leaves no imprint when lightly touched, 35 to 40 minutes. Serve warm or chilled in dessert dishes. Serves 6.

Cherry-O-Cheese Pie

1 crumb crust
8 ounces cream cheese
1 can condensed milk

Beat cream cheese and condensed milk until fluffy. Add:

⅓ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla

Top with cherry pie filling or use 1 pint canned cherries thickened as follows:

½ cup cherry juice
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch

Cook until thickened. Add pint of cherries. Makes 1 9-inch pie.

Candy Making

RONKS (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Salted Nut Company, 2857-B Lincoln Hwy. E, Ronks, is celebrating Easter with a chocolate a nut candy making demonstration on Saturday, April 18 from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

The confection making process will be explained by Delores Deiter, a local chocolatier. Ms. Deiter will be using recipes with nuts as a major ingredient and has selected six varieties of candies to demonstrate.

Boyertown Holds 17th Quilt Show

BOYERTOWN (Berks Co.) — Members of the Boyertown Area Historical Society are at work on one of their most interesting and colorful projects, their annual Quilt Show. This 17th exhibit is slated for Saturday, May 2, 10 to 6, and Sunday, May 3, noon to 6, and will be held at the Society's building, 43 South Chestnut Street, Boyertown.

The show, which contains more than 100 quilts and/or wall hangings includes 19th and 20th century quilts, most of which were made in southeastern Pennsylvania. These antique textiles portray the talent and love of color possessed by yesteryear's quilters, especially exemplified by Pennsylvania German heritage quilts. The contemporary wall hangings and quilts reflect the ability and artistry of today's fabric artists.

The theme of this year's show will be "Plaids and Stripes then and Now" with special emphasis placed on both quilts and wall hangings using these fabrics. The exhibit will depict how past and present quilters utilized geometric patterned cloth in their handcrafted textiles. Also on display will be a new "Jewel Box" design quilt made by Show chairman, Rosie Mutter, and quilted by her and her mother, Katie Reifsnyder. Reflecting the Show's theme this essentially "scrap" quilt features a potpourri of plaid and striped fabrics.

Another highlight of the Show will be lectures by quilt and Pennsylvania German folk culture researcher, Nancy Roan, and quilting instructor, Rosie Mutter. Mrs. Roan's lecture, "Fabrics (Material) Used By Pennsylvania German Quiltmakers," will be held on Saturday, May 2, at 11:30 a.m. Mrs. Mutter will present a lecture entitled "Marking Your Finished Quilt Top" on Saturday, May 2 and Sunday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m. Using easel paper sketches, she will show what marking designs can be used for empty spaces on pieced or applique quilt tops, how to make border designs or corners, and other useful marking design techniques.

There is a $3 donation for the Show, children under sixteen admitted free if accompanied by an adult.

¼ pound butter
¼ teaspoon lemon juice
¼ cup honey

Melt butter; mix with honey and juice. Pour over chicken. Bake 15 minutes more, turn chicken over on other side. Bake 15 minutes more.

All Generations Enjoy Watching Chicks Hatch

CLAIRE McCABE
University of Delaware

First, there's some slight movement in the egg. Then, some more motion, rocking back and forth. Next, a small hole appears in the shell as a chick chips its way out with its egg tooth. The hole gets bigger. The chick pecks some more. The egg continues rocking back and forth. One to 24 hours later, the chick finally breaks free of its calcium prison. Feathers still wet from albumen, the chick lays prone, exhausted from its arduous task.

This miracle of life is brought to thousands of Delaware students each year through the University of Delaware's 4-H embryology project. Todd Chaikin, coordinator of the embryology project in New Castle County and a university senior, visits 35 to 40 schools each year, reaching 7,500 participants. Chaikin, who believes that learning is for all ages, has also taken his project to serveral retirement communities.

The project begins when a school rents an incubator from the university for $5. Fertile eggs are purchased at $3 a dozen and may include Rhode Island Reds, White Leghorns or Delaware Blue Hens. Chaikin makes an initial visit to set up the incubator and give a presentation that covers information about hatching and brooding the chicks.

"The purpose of this program is to have fun and to learn," says Chaikin. "The excitement of hatching chicks can 'trick' children into learning a number of subjects in addition to biology."

A packet of learning material accompanies each incubator with suggestions for math class (plot incubation period on a time line) and English class (learn vocabulary words associated with the project), as well as puzzles and other activities. Chaikin says the project is suitable for kindergartners as well as high school students. The uses of the project are limited only by the imagination of the teacher.

Mrs. Kate Cogan, second-grade teacher at Ursuline Academy, is a veteran of the embryology project. She has tied in the embryology project with her science lessons. Her students have also researched information, written stories and viewed film strips related to the project. Cogan said they have even discussed the project as part of their religion class.

This spring, Chaikin asked Cogan's class to participate in a joint embryology project with residents at Ingleside Homes retirement community. The incubators were set up at Ingleside, where Cogan's class could visit.

"Using the project as a combined school-retirement home setting creates an intergenerational activity that benefits all involved," Chaikin said.

Peggy Barker, director of the cultural center at Ingleside, agreed.

"Our residents got so involved with the project, I was getting calls at home," she said. "Everyone, resident or staff, gets involved in the project. When the chicks are here, that's the number-one topic, even more important than what's for lunch."

The 4-H embryology project helps students understand the growth of poultry.

"We're still trying to find out which came first, the chicken or the egg," joked Helen Entriken, one of the residents.

Tom Stoddard, also a resident, added, "We sang lullabies to bring the eggs along."

When the students visited, they were able to consult with residents on names for the chicks--Mike, Ike, Paddy and Chip were popular. The students also heard residents tell of raising chickens on their own farms.

The embryology project has been a part of Delaware's 4-H outreach since the 1970s. The three-week process from fertilization to hatching is shortened for classroom purposes. Chaikin preincubates the eggs so that they arrive at the classroom on approximately day 16 of their incubation. Within a week of receiving the eggs, a classroom can be filled with the cheeping of live chicks.

"The three-week program either kept the children over- excited for the whole time, or they lost interest," says Chaikin. "A one-week format allows the project to fit easily into a teacher's curriculum."

In addition, the shortened format allows the project to reach more people with a limited number of incubators. Despite increasing the incubators from 15 to 40, last year 4-H had to turn down 35 schools that wanted to be involved in the project.

Interested teachers should contact their local county extension office if they would like a project.

Easter Baskets Ready For 200 Disadvantaged Children

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — "Let's get moving down there; things are piling up," a voice rose above the din of good-natured ribbing and laughter that permeated several classrooms at the Ruhl's United Methodist Church last week.

It was the 55- to 85-year-old church members who were raising a ruckus. In assembly-line fashion they were stuffing Easter baskets for underprivileged children.

The baskets are distributed through the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program in Pennsylvania (EFNEP), a federally-funded program through Penn State Cooperative Extension, which provides nutrition education to disadvantaged families.

"At Christmastime, everyone remembers the needy, but at Easter they don't," Brenda Stahlman, EFNEP unit coordinator, had told these members about six years ago.

Under the impetus of Arlene Frey, members make sure that the needy are not forgotten during the Easter season. Five years ago, the group began this project by filling 50 baskets. Every year, they increase the amount. This year, members filled 200 Easter baskets with candy, crayons, coloring book, tablet, washcloth, comb, toothpaste and brush and a matchbox car or doll for underprivileged children in Lancaster County.

Gathering the materials to fill the baskets is a year-round job for Arlene and Bob Frey, who initiated the project.

The couple collects recyclable plastic milk jugs that are cut in the shape of a rabbit. A handle is attached and the faces handpainted to turn the milk jugs into delightful rabbit baskets.

Each year, Arlene searches for appropriate toys to be included in the baskets. This year, a matchbox car was chosen for the boys and tiny dolls for the girls. Stuffed toys are given to infants and toddlers.

Arlene molds some of the chocolate crosses included in the basket. Fifty pounds of jelly beans and assorted chocolate candy are purchased or partially donated by local businesses or individuals who enjoy buying items with their own money.

It takes money to buy supplies to fill 200 baskets. To raise the money, participants work on projects year around. In the fall, they make 150 pounds of peanut butter cups to sell at a bazaar. Some members collect aluminum cans to recycle. Recently several men stripped old wires to get copper and brass that earned them $198 from a recycling center.

The church does not limit their caring to making Easter baskets. They also provide homemaker supplies for the EFNEP group to distribute. At Christmas they donate mittens, hats, and scarfs for the children. They make quilts and comforters that are given to the local Clothing Bank to distribute.

Brenda said, "Ruhl's church is phenomenal in its outreach to the underprivileged. It makes the recipients really feel like someone is concerned because they take enough time to make sure their children have an Easter basket."

Arlene Frey is the organizer behind the 55- to 85-year-old class members who compile Easter baskets for children from low-income families.

This gang believes they have as much fun filling Easter baskets as the recipients who get to keep them will have.

York Blacksmith Keeps Anvil Art Alive

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

HELLAM (York Co.)— When a customer asked Lewis Frantz if his merchandise would rust, he assured her that, if it did not, something was wrong with it.

Frantz is a blacksmith, practicing an almost vanishing craft. He creates from raw steel, round rods and flat strips which he heats, pounds, bends, and shapes into practical and decorative items. And, because those items are made from steel, a rust spot or two after normal use is simply part of the aging of his artwork.

Working from a shop at the rear of his Hellam home, Frantz crafts designs as simple as S-hooks for hanging and as intricate as candleholders and fireplace sets.

Though intrigued with blacksmithing for some time, Frantz has been working at it full-time just since January. A former machinist for Dupont Electronics, an early retirement offering last fall presented him the opportunity to expand his craftmanship to a career.

One of his first jobs was in a machine shop which had originally been a blacksmith shop. When the shop was moved, Frantz acquired the blacksmithing tools and equipment, intending to display it. But about 1980, Frantz's interest picked up.

"I read about an organization that wanted to train people to learn the art of blacksmithing," he recalls. "After a couple of meetings, I got hooked."

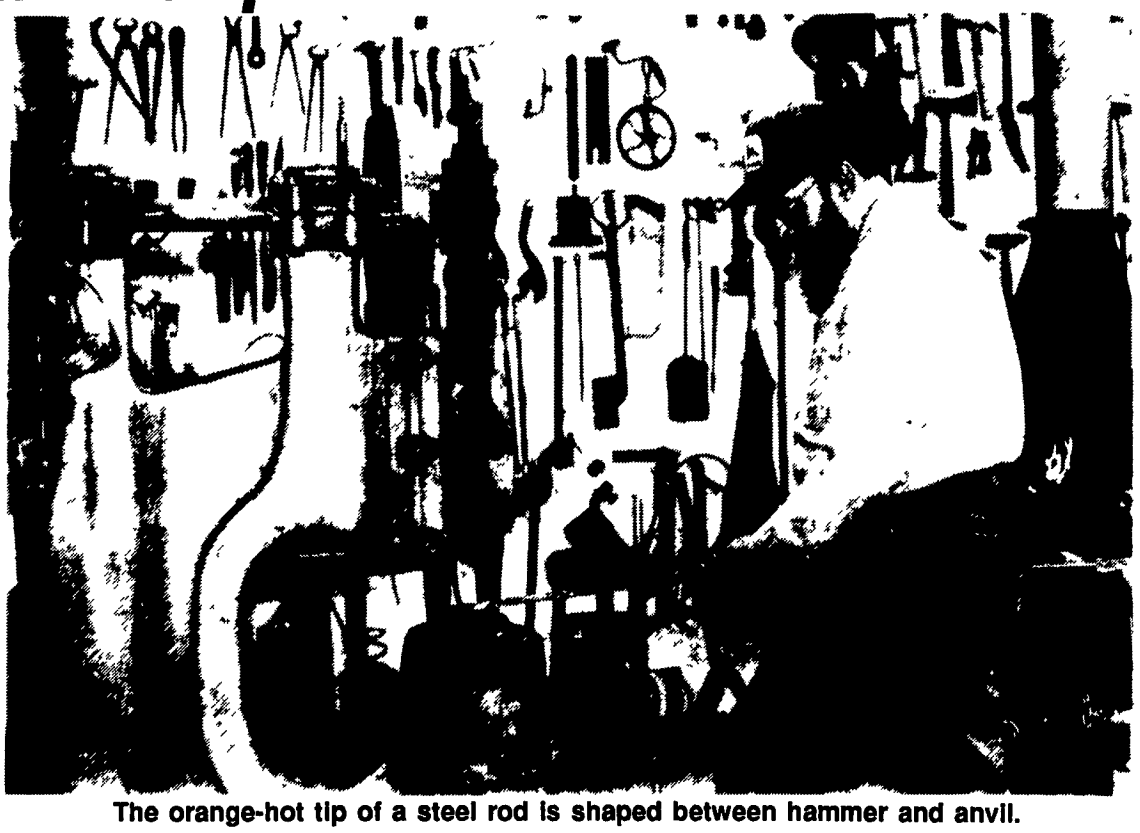
Today, Lewis Frantz is secretary of the Pennsylvania Blacksmiths' Association, and a member of several related regional and national groups. He and his wife Joy travel up and down the East Coast participating in blacksmith gatherings and demonstrations.

The first creative touch he learned from such a demonstration was the forming of a leaf design. Frantz became so adept at fashioning the leaf that he has since adopted it as a sort of trademark of his creations. A steel leaf, with a slightly raised center and visible veining, adds unique originality to many of his pieces. The "L.J. Frantz" stamped signature further authenticates his work.

One of the most popular items at Frantz's Ye Olde Work Shoppe craft show displays is a plant stand. Fashioned somewhat like a shepherd's crook, the sturdy iron stand is gracefully curved at the top, for a hanging plant or perhaps a patio lantern, with a pointed end on the bottom for insertion into the ground.

Another favorite is the triangular dinner bell, in varying sizes, sounding a clear musical tone when struck with the matching clapper. Gracefully-curved, heart-shaped dinner bells are a newer design in Frantz's creations, reflecting a current popularity of heart designs in country decorating.

Plant stands and dinner bells are just a few of the attractive, durable and useful items in the rustic-looking showroom recently added to the Hellam blacksmith's workshop. Candle-hangers, also called herb dryers or basket-hangers, are displayed from the old barn beams overhead. On the warm-beige barn siding walls are cup or mug hooks, towel and toilet tissue holders, bootscrapers, pot racks, rolling pin holders and ear-corn or fruit dryers with sharp prongs for fastening on the item to be dried.



The orange-hot tip of a steel rod is shaped between hammer and anvil.

Joy and Lewis Frantz demonstrate use of the triangular dinner bell.

Lewis Frantz fires up his traditional blacksmith coal forge. A hand-cranked blower at the rear of the forge forces air up through the coals, generating 2500-degree or more temperatures in the small fire.

Favorite of many customers is the fireplace set, a shovel, broom and poker which hang on a free-standing rack. A curtained window features heart-shaped curtain hangers and tiebacks. Heavy spoons, dippers and "fleshing" forks, originally a butchering tool, are on display on their own hanging racks.

Among the more unusual and whimsical are "courtin' candles," iron candle stands of a spiral design, which allow the candle to be raised or lowered.

"How high or low a mother adjusted the candle's burning time depended on how well she liked the young man courting her daughter," explains Joy Frantz of this popular gift item.

Frantz's forged designs are all finished with a semi-gloss black enamel or a clear sealer. They look pure "Americana," professionally finished yet with the unmistakeable touch of homemade craftmanship.

In fact, the Frantzes chuckle as they relate an instance of browsing through an antique shop some time ago. Joy noticed that all of a sudden Lewis "stopped dead" in a part of the shop.

"They had a fleshing fork and it was labeled an 'early' tool," she laughs. "It was one of Lewis's; he recognized it immediately."

The good-natured blacksmith declined the opportunity to tell the shop operator where the piece had originated.

Ideas for his creations come from blacksmith and "country" publications, as well as customer requests for particular items. And while he uses some patterned ideas, many of them are original.

"I think them up," he says of many of the designs. "And I never make anything exactly like I see it somewhere. I'll change the size or the shape, or add something to it."

Frantz markets some of his iron artistry through regional craft and steam engine shows. Adams County's apple harvest festival and the York Fair are two of the larger annual events. One of the most memorable activities in which the Frantzes have taken part was York's 250th anniversary celebration last year.

National television coverage of the event included Frantz's blacksmithing demonstration at the downtown York restored Plough Tavern. Celebrity weatherman Willard Scott took home a special commemorative horseshoe made by Lewis Frantz.

"Television crews that come to cover events like steam shows often like to include some shots of blacksmithing," smiles Frantz. "Whenever that happens, it stimulates interest in what we're doing."

Steam shows, media interest, and word-of-mouth have helped to sell Frantz's iron artistry as far away as Alaska and Hawaii. He also enjoys demonstrating the craft, often telling children that steel can be "as soft as chewing gum, but strong enough to tow your dad's car."

Frantz's well-equipped shop is something of a blacksmithing museum. Collections of tools neatly line the walls, many of them old and retrieved from flea markets, but still useful for this traditional skill. The forge with hand-cranked blower is the same one Frantz used to drag outside to fire up, before installing the chimney to carry off smoke from the inside shop.

"Green" or new soft coal is lit with wadded paper to start the small fire, heated quickly to a high temperature by blowing a draft of air up through the bottom of the forge. The heat converts the coal to coke, which puffs up in a sort of popcorn effect as the impurities of the coal are burned off.

"The coke is what is actually burned," says Frantz, cranking the blower to the forge. The fire itself is confined to about a ten-inch circle of intense heat by pouring a small amount of water around the outer edges of the fuel.

Temperatures inside the small ring of fire in the forge quickly reache 2,500 degrees and turns the end of a half-inch flat steel rod orange-hot in just seconds. The blacksmith removes the rod, and begins "drawing" it on the anvil, a process of lengthening the steel by pounding it out with a hammer.

"All a blacksmith needs is a hammer, an anvil and a forge," observes Frantz.

But modern technology gives this 1990's blacksmith an edge over his early-American predecessors. Frantz fires up the coal forge only for a few crafting procedures, instead preferring the more-efficient, state-of-the-art gas forge. Resembling a toaster-oven, the small rectangular unit heats on the blue flame of propane until the inside firebrick and insulating wools glow orange. Temperature can be regulated, a great improvement over the fluctuating temperatures of the coke forge.

"You can put a piece of iron in there, walk away from it, and it won't burn," says Frantz of the greater flexibility of the gas unit. "It's a fairly new technology. Farriers started using them about 4 or 5 years ago bacause of the portability for shoeing horses and now blacksmiths are using them."

A foot-feed, trip hammer helps eliminate the shoulder-wrenching chore of pounding steel with a hand-held hammer. More efficient, the mechanical hammer shapes the heat-softened steel with blows of 50-pound force, rather than the 3-pound force of a hand hammer. And, Frantz can shape a half-inch rod of steel into a neat triangular dinner bell with three quick turns on a hand-operated "bender."

Still, technology cannot replace the finishing touches put on these creations by the skilled hands of a blacksmith-artisan, like the delicate hand-wrought scroll twists and Frantz's trademark leaf. Constantly looking for better techniques and greater perfection, he takes every opportunity to learn from fellow craftsmen.

On Saturday, April 25, Lewis and Joy Frantz will host the spring meeting of the Pennsylvania Blacksmiths' Association at their Hellam shop. Special guest at the gathering is Maryland blacksmith Daniel Boone, a descendent of the American pioneer folk-hero. Boone will be demonstrating his craft trademark, the dragonhead, for the several dozen blacksmith professionals and hobbyists expected to attend.

For more information on the Pennsylvania Blacksmiths' Association or the custom ornamental and traditional iron creations of Ye Olde Work Shop, contact Lewis Frantz at 420 East Market Street, Hellam, PA 17406 or call (717) 755-4797. Customer hours at the shop are presently by appointment only.

Families Needed To Host Russian Ag Students

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture and the University of Maryland are looking for Maryland families to host agricultural students from the Commonwealth of Independent States (the former Soviet Union) for the fourth straight summer as part of an exchange program. The students would spend two months in Maryland during the summer of 1992 working on farms and learning American customs.

With the many upheavals taking place in this part of the world, these exchanges present a chance to learn first-hand about how these governmental changes have affected the lives of ordinary citizens as well as agricultural operations.

Each host family would be required to provide room and board for the exchange students and a small salary for their work on the farm. Transportation expenses to and from the United States will be paid by the students. Host families in Maryland need not be able to speak Russian as all the students will have an excellent working knowledge of English.

Anyone interested in being a Maryland host for a Soviet agriculture student should contact Robert L. Walker, secretary, Maryland Department of Agriculture, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, Md. 21401, Telephone (301) 841-5881 or Dr. John R. Moore, Assistant Dean for International Programs, Colleges of Agriculture and Life Sciences, University of Maryland, College Park, Md. 20742, Telephone (301) 454-6407.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

On a recent trip to Washington, D.C., I had an opportunity to see the cherry trees in bloom around the tidal basin. However, it was a cold and windy day when I took the one day trip.

Our group spent some time at the Old Post Office building. Instead of tearing it down it has been converted to shops and cafeterias. Here there was a choice of Chinese, Indian or American food. Also in this building is a glass-enclosed elevator that took us part way to an open viewing area high in a tower. We were told the fine piano wire over the openings were the only thing keeping the birds out and us in as we had a panoramic view of the capitol. The wind surely whistled through those wires.

In the afternoon I had the opportunity to visit the Hillwood Museum which was developed by Marjorie Merriweather Post, the cereal heiress. The 40-room Georgian mansion houses a very large collection of fine Russian art. There were porcelain dishes, Faberge eggs, French furniture and tapestries. I walked through several gardens, a Russian country house, and a lodge with American Indian artifacts.

Early last week I finally got my garden planted. The soil in our old garden is very fine and a bit sandy to a depth of eight or ten inches. As it has been used for centuries, there are no stones in it. Now this compares to the clay soil that got strewn on top of our garden in the meadow where we now live. I just cannot get accustomed to the clods that I must break up as I transplant some of my flowers from the farm. I'm hoping they will grow in the different soil.

SAFETY! It's no accident

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

In the microwave oven, meatloaf cooks in 15 to 20 minutes, instead of the hour, or hour and a half you expect conventionally. Microwaved meatloaves are round and flat. We do not recommend square or loaf shapes, because the corners absorb too much energy and will be overcooked by the time the center is done.

A conventionally baked meatloaf occasionally has areas on the top which are overbrown. When microwaved, these areas may appear on the bottom edges of the loaf. Because microwave energy is attracted to sweet mixtures, toppings which contain sugar, syrup or preserves can increase overbrowning if they come in contact with the bottom edges. When applied before microwaving, they should be brushed only on the top. Plain meatloaf looks grey. It needs a topping, sauce or browning agent for attractive color. Ketchup, chili or barbeque sauces make easy toppings.

HOW TO MICROWAVE A PIE-SHAPED MEATLOAF

Use 1 to 2 pounds ground beef. If you are adapting a recipe, choose a moist mixture. Spread the mixture in a pie plate. The top should be very flat and about even with the top of the dish. Brush the top with a browning agent or sauce. Cover tightly with a plastic wrap.

BASIC MEATLOAF

1 1/2 lbs. ground chuck beef
3/4 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
1 egg
2 tablespoons ketchup
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/8 teaspoon paprika
2 tablespoons ketchup

Mix together beef, onion, crumbs, egg, ketchup, milk and seasonings. Mold into a rounded, flat loaf in a 9 inch pie plate. Spread ketchup evenly over top of loaf. Microwave at HIGH power level for approximately 15 to 20 minutes. Makes about 6 servings.

SOUPER MEATLOAF

2 lbs ground chuck beef
1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/3 cup chopped onion
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup, divided
2 tablespoons beef bouillon granules

Mix together beef, crumbs, onion, egg, 1/2 of soup and bouillon. Shape into flat loaf in 10 in. pie plate. Microwave at MEDIUM HIGH power for approximately 22 to 25 minutes. Let loaf stand 10 minutes. Serve with rest of topping.

TOPPING

Mix remaining soup with 1 teaspoon beef bouillon granules and 1/3 cup water. Microwave at HIGH power for 2 to 3 minutes. This becomes very hot.

CHEESE STUFFED MEATLOAF

This meatloaf tastes like a cheeseburger and will be popular with your family.

1 1/2 lbs. ground chuck beef
3 slices fresh bread, cubed
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese
3 slices fresh bread, finely crumbled

Make meatloaf mixture. In large mixing bowl, mix together beef, bread, milk, salt and pepper.

Make cheese stuffing. In 1 1/2 qt. casserole place onion, pepper, celery and lemon juice. Microwave at HIGH for 3 minutes. Add egg to hot vegetables and stir to blend well. Stir in cheese and fine bread crumbs.

To assemble meatloaf: Pat half of the meat mixture in bottom of 9 inch pie plate. Mound filling over meat leaving about 1 inch uncovered at edges. Spread remaining meat mixture over filling. Seal around edges. Brush assembled meatloaf with 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Microwave at HIGH power for 25 to 30 minutes.

LEMON LOVERS MEATLOAF

Lemon juice and a garnish of lemon slices add tang to this meatloaf.

3/4 cup ketchup
1/4 cup brown sugar (packed)
3/4 teaspoon dry mustard
1/4 teaspoon allspice
Dash of Cloves
1 1/2 lbs. ground chuck beef
3 slices day old bread, cubed
1 egg, beaten
1/3 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup chopped onion
2 teaspoons salt
6 very thin lemon slices

In a small bowl mix together ketchup, brown sugar, dry mustard, allspice and cloves. Set aside.

Mix together beef, bread, egg, lemon juice, onion and salt. Mold into rounded flat loaf in a 9 inch pie plate.

Spread half the reserved sauce over loaf and arrange lemon slices on top. Microwave at HIGH power for 15 to 20 minutes. Remove plastic wrap and spread remaining sauce over loaf before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Grange Celebrates 125-Year Heritage

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — They don't travel to meetings by horse anymore. Cars have taken their place.

They're no longer just farmers. Members' careers are as varied as society itself.

During its 125 year history, Grangers have seen many changes not only in society but also in their own organization. But one component remains as strong today as when Oliver Hudson Kelley first started the National Grange movement in 1867, and that's the values of family and community.

"The Pennsylvania State Grange is really a family-based organization," said Steve Robinson, public relations director for the Grange. "There are activities for every member of the family starting from age five on up. Studies show the pendulum is swinging back from the 'me' attitude of the 80s to strong family and community values and the Grange is here to answer that need."

The Grange was started as a family-farm fraternity shortly after the Civil War as one way to reconcile differences between farmers of the north and south. Its formation made it the first organized farm movement in the nation. It also was the first organization to give women the right to vote on an equal basis.

Today the Grange takes an interest in all issues that concern rural Pennsylvania, including health care, education, road maintenance, economic development, the environment, agriculture, and family and community.

"Local Granges take an active part in bettering their community," Robinson said. "Each year thousands of dollars and service hours are given back to the community."

This year Perry Valley Grange in Perry County hosted a Thanksgiving dinner for needy people in their area.

"We are always looking for ways to serve the community," said Doug Bonsall, master (president) of Perry Valley. "This was our way to reach the hidden homeless and needy of our rural community."

Lakeland Grange in Crawford County won this year's highest honor in community service by helping to renovate an area personal care home. Members joined forces with the Boy Scouts to paint, plaster, repair, wallpaper, and clean one wing of the home so more patients could be served.

Acting as a legislative voice for rural Pennsylvania is another important aspect of the organization, according to Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh. The Grange is a grassroots movement which gets all its policy from its members. An idea is presented at a local Grange. This idea is passed by the local chapter in the form of a resolution. Next, this resolution is voted on by delegates from each local Grange at an annual state convention. Adopted resolutions then become Pennsylvania State Grange policy which Shambaugh lobbies for in Harrisburg.

Local Granges also take up issues on their own. Dorsett Grange in Concord, Franklin County, is working with their township supervisors to protect water supplies from excess nutrient run-off.

Other Granges host public meetings to inform community members about local concerns. Battlefield Grange in Gettysburg recently hosted such a meeting where representatives from local government, Dusquesne Power and Light and the State Public Utility Commission discussed a controversial power line proposed for the area.

"The Grange structure is flexible enough to allow it to meet the needs of each individual community," said state Master William H. Ringler. "Whether it be working with local government, participating in community service or providing fellowship, the local Grange does its part to improve an area for its residents."

The more than 35,000 members of Pennsylvania State Grange and 325,000 National members will celebrate their heritage during Grange Week, April 19 to 25. A legislative banquet and workshops will be held Monday, May 4, at the Sheraton Inn Harrisburg as part of this celebration. For more information, call 1-800-552-3865.

Appreciation Night Honors Volunteers, Agencies

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — April 9 was appreciation night for the many supporters of the Pennsylvania Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) in Lancaster County.

EFNEP helps low-income families and youth improve their diets through education and better use of resources. Three nutritional educational advisors work with homemakers individually and in groups.

EFNEP was initiated in 1969 by Penn State Cooperative Extension Service and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Brenda Stahlman, unit coordinator of the program for 12 years, said that the annual meeting enables those who help contribute to the program know what is happening behind the scenes.

Primarily, the appreciation night is expressing appreciation for the people who make the program successful. But in a twist of events, the agencies who network with EFNEP, expressed their belief that EFNEP is helping them more than they are helping EFNEP.

"The EFNEP program is excellent, but the people involved go beyond the program," said Ed Heston, director of Barnes Hall, a home for delinquents. "Brenda and Nita (Anita Rhawn) have a heck of an impact on the program. The kids can't wait for them to come in. I can't say enough for them."

Three siblings recounted how EFNEP affected their lifestyle.

"What I like about the program is eating," said Elizabeth Fisher, 12, of Manheim. "I learned about nutrition and how to keep my body healthy." She reported that cooking skills she gained through EFNEP not only help her family eat better but have enabled her to win 4-H ribbons for her applesauce and some other food projects.

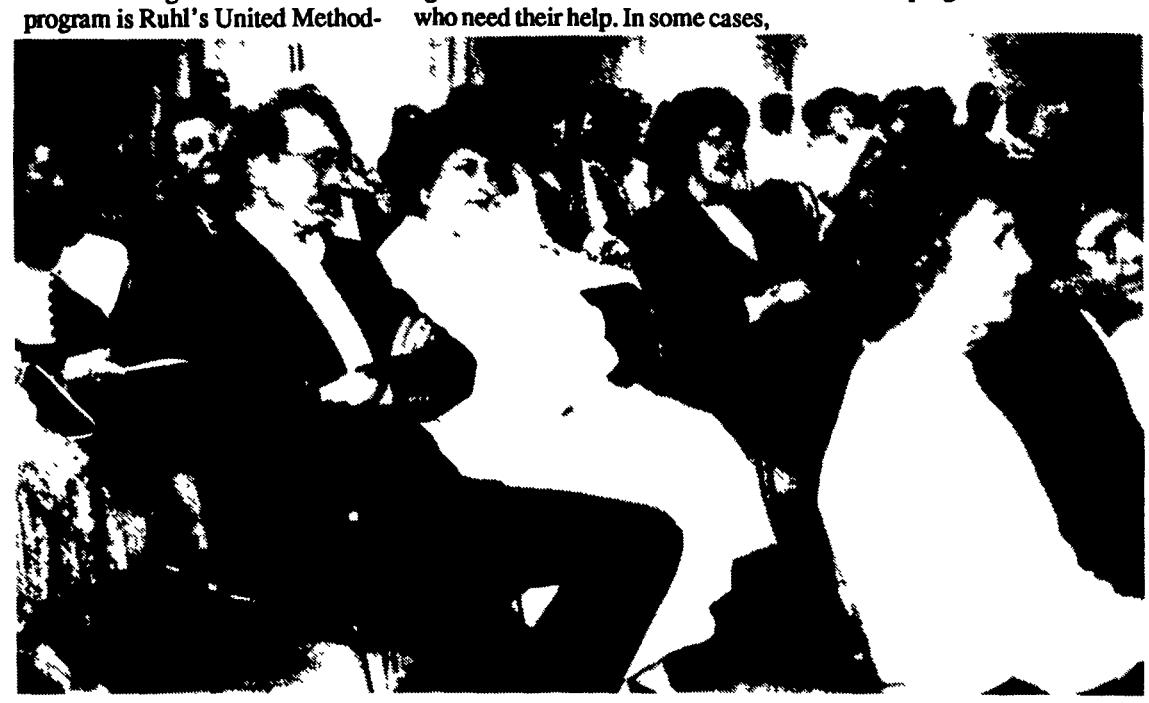
Residents from a home for abused women and children are also taught nutritional cooking skills through EFNEP. "Many of the residents, who, at first, are skeptical of participating in the classes, said that they are surprised nutrition classes can be so interesting when taught by EFNEP nutritional advisors.

Because EFNEP has not received additional funds for many years, they now need to rely more upon volunteers and businesses to help provide materials needed.

One of the primary groups cited for outstanding contributions to the program is Ruhl's United Methodist Church in Manheim.

"I can't say enough about this church," Brenda said. "It is people like them who make EFNEP succeed."

In addition to volunteers, EFNEP networks with other social agencies to find out about families who need their help. In some cases, EFNEP is mandated by the courts to work with a family that is temporarily separated so that they can be reunited. This past year, EFNEP workd with approximately 500 high risk people through the 4-H and adult program.



EFNEP expressed appreciation to volunteers, agency people, and county commissioners who help support the program with time or donations.

These siblings from the Manheim area told how the EFNEP program has benefitted them. From left: Natalie, 8; Elizabeth, 12; Anita, 10; and Luke, 6.

Brenda Stallman serves punch to James Benson, staff person from Barnes Hall, who attended the EFNEP appreciation night on April 9.

...with John Deere rotary mower/conditioners. Exclusive rolls feature cleats with indentations. This concentrates roll pressure on a smaller area. And these intermeshing cleats give you 21 percent more crimping edges than chevron-styled rolls. Put simply, John Deere gets you baling or chopping sooner. Here's something you won't find anywhere else. Urethane rolls. Advantage? Urethane is molded at cool temperatures so the metal core doesn't warp. So you gain thorough conditioning across the entire width. See your John Deere dealer for the 9-foot 9-inch 1460 or 11-foot 6-inch 1470 Rotary Mower/Conditioner.

4-H Plays Dramatic Role In Environmental Expo

"Why did the chicken cross the street? Because it got under a lawn mower." Tom McCarty, water quality agent for Cumberland County Cooperative Extension, demonstrates how easily lawn mower accidents can happen. Chicken bones are being used because they have similar structures as human feet. A very graphic example of safety.

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.)— 4-H'ers living on the West Shore literally "played" an active part in the Environmental Expo held in Camp Hill on April 2, 3, and 4. The Camp Hill Performing Arts 4-H Club, specifically the 4-H Performing Earthlings, performed a fun rap song, dance, and play to convey a message to the public. The theme was: "Earth. Love it or lose it." This was one of many 4-H activities open to the public during the weekend.

Thursday evening spirited a rocket launch demonstration hosted by the Camp Hill Altitude Busters 4-H club. Friday night concluded with a fashion show of garments and projects made by many West Shore youth. All of these activities were part of an effort to "educate parents, youth, and potential leaders about the 4-H program on the West Shore". Anthony Betonte, 4-H Coordinator in Cumberland County, added that staff and clubs were trying to show "what 4-H is and what is means".

Embryology is one project that has been very successful in classrooms. Slyvania Negley, 4-H program assistant, shared how the program has grown among elementary schools. During the summer months, they have 4-H programs meeting daily that are part of Latchkey programs. Three to four programs are ongoing at one time. Sylvania's enthusiasm showed as she talked about projects such as "Meet the Plant".

Expo Encourages Backyard Actions For Healthy Earth

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.)— An Environmental Expo captured people's attention at the Camp Hill Mall on April 2, 3, and 4. The theme was to "give people things they can do" to help the environment, according to Tom McCarty, water quality specialist for Penn State Cooperative Extension. More than 19 exhibitors filled the isles of the mall. In addition to being an environmental education event, 4-H projects were combined with the other exhibits. It served as a Round-Up for youth living on the West Shore. Members displayed projects they worked on all year. The "Camp Hill Players", a 4-H club, wrote and choreographed a song written especially for the environmental play.

The U.S. Geological Survey had an extensive exhibit about surface and ground water at the show. Mike Langland, a hydrologist based in Lemoyne, explained that all of the headwater for the Susquehanna River Basin begins in New York State and empties into the Chesapeake Bay. In Cumberland, Lancaster, York, and Adams Counties, specialists are looking at management practices of surface water, ground water and water quality.

Studies are being done in cooperation with DER and Chesapeake Bay groups. Mike shared that farmers are very conscious and aware of issues with the land and are trying to prevent nutrient run-off. As an agency, the U.S. Geological Survey's goal in working with farmers is to identify a problem and work toward solutions. The long-range goal is to improve water quality. It is not to find persons responsible for problems.

Penn State Cooperative Extension featured a visual display about Lawn Mower Safety. Tom McCarty shared that it is easy to have an accident, but accidents are preventable. A look at physics helps to explain why being near the blade of a lawn mower is so dangerous. The blade rotates at a rate of 3600 RPM's or 60 times per second. If a person's foot comes within the area of the machine's blade, it takes an average reaction time of at least 1/3 second to remove it. In that 1/3 second, a person is hit 40 times, even if they have a fast reaction! Tom showed a one inch segment of chicken bone chopped by a lawn mower, as a graphic illustration of the damage that can happen.

Other exhibitors included: Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay, Big Spring High School, Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Conodoguinet Watershed Association, Cumberland County Conservation District, Cumberland County Library System, Cumberland Valley Appalachian Trail Association, Dauphin County Master Gardeners, DER Bureau of Forestry, DER Bureau of Waste Management, DER Public Liason Office, DER State Water Plan Division, Harrisburg Area Civic Garden Center, Penn Cumberland Garden Club, Penn State Extension, Sierra Club, Southcentral PA Energy Center, Trout Unlimited, U.S. Geological Survey, and Yellow Breches Watershed Association.

Jim Bubb, computer assistant, and Mike Langland, hydrologist, show people water resources in the Susquehanna Valley. They are employed by the Geological Survey and have many resources for groups to use with children.

This will be the largest and best selection of New England and New York state cattle offered for sale in one day anywhere.

The fresh cattle are an outstanding group, with fancy udders - cows milking 80 to 100 lbs. and heifers already milking in the 70's.

The springing cows have size, style, showing a lot of milk and are mostly from complete herds we have purchased or dispersals sales.

3. 2 groups of all registered springing and short bred heifers from 2 farmers who have previously sold their milking herd - All calfhood vaccinated.

4. 50 heifers from one farm from 3 months old to springers - all the man had - an outstanding load - raised the right way - also mostly calfhood vaccinated.

5. Mostly likely the best group of 35 fancy open heifers to be found anywhere from one farm in Vermont - 25 ready to breed now weighing 800 - 850 lbs. - 10 that will weigh 700-750 lbs. - all calfhood vaccinated.

6. 50 big strong heifers due from May - July from our own heifer pens including 35 registered heifers from top sires and from dams with records to 25,000 lbs. milk - all calfhood vaccinated.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Dale Olver
Instructor Of Dairy
And Animal Science

In today's economic climate, many people are concerned with the outlook for career opportunities in agriculture. College students, parents, and guidance counselors all have expressed concern about the future for graduates in the agricultural sciences.

At Penn State, we have seen a university-wide decrease in job interviews and offers, regardless of college or major. Many graduating students find that the ideal job they have spent years preparing for may not be offered to them or even exist in the current job market. However, many fine opportunities are still available for qualified students in dairy and animal science.

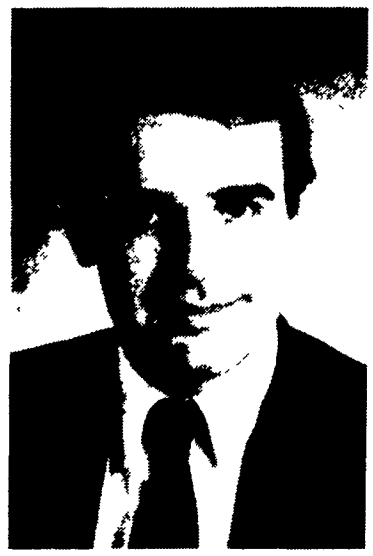
The fastest growing area in agricultural careers is in the technical sales and service area. Companies need people who can successfully market their firms' products and services to producers and consumers. Feed companies, pharmaceutical firms, equipment dealers, and agricultural lending institutions offered students a variety of employment opportunities last year. They usually look for students with an understanding of agricultural issues, business and work experience, and strong communication skills.

The Department of Dairy and Animal Science receives many requests for qualified individuals to work as herdspersons or farm managers. These jobs almost always require previous farm experience. In response, the department has compiled a listing of farm operations that offer summer employment to students. [If you would like your farm or business to be included in this list, please call (814) 863-3914 or (814) 863-0569, and we will send you the appropriate form.]

The number of positions in extension, breed associations, and other agencies has not increased significantly during the last few years. With many of these organizations downsizing or maintaining current staffing levels, competition here is intense because large numbers of people with previous experience are currently seeking employment in this market.

An increasing number of students are pursuing advanced degrees in graduate or veterinary schools. These students often aspire to careers in extension, teaching, or research in advanced nutrition, physiology, or genetics. Many will enter the growing field of farm consultants.

Those who attend veterinary school most often want to become practitioners or researchers, either in private practice, in clinics, or at universities. With a shortage of large animal veterinarians, career prospects for these students are promising. There is also a continuing need for well-trained animal research scientists.



Dale Olver

The key to success in today's current job market is flexibility. Employment recruiters agree that the main factors they look for in potential employees are academic achievement, work experience, and extracurricular activities. Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science listens closely to this message, and has adjusted its major to reflect current trends based on input from alumni, employers, and graduate programs from around the country.

The Dairy and Animal Science major currently offers four options, all of which include courses in farm economics, basic nutrition, and species management. However, the options vary in supporting class structure. For instance, dairy production-management and animal production-management emphasis additional skills needed by herdspersons or farm managers. Courses in nutrition, veterinary science, breeding, and agronomy provide a strong background for employment opportunities in production agriculture.

The business option is very popular with both students and employers. In addition to the required core major courses, students may select from approximately 30 business classes that broaden their understanding of economics, management, and finance. Many of our students choose accounting, insurance, business law, business logistics, and sales classes. This major provides students with maximum flexibility in pursuing careers in many aspects of agriculture.

The fourth option in the dairy and animal science major is the science option, which prepares students for graduate school or veterinary school. Students enrolled in this option take courses which are required by most graduate and veterinary programs for admission, such as physics, anatomy, and higher-level biochemistry. Most people believe that this is the most academically challenging of the four options in the dairy and animal science major.

In addition to a strong academic background, many employers emphasize work experience. We strongly urge our students to apply for summer internships as a way to gain experience. These opportunities can be very useful in learning about a career and how to deal with people. Students can also obtain work experience at university farm facilities, research laboratories, and through independent studies (studying independently under the supervision of department faculty and staff). As the job market tightens, there is no question that previous work experience is an increasingly decisive factor for employers.

Extracurricular activities such as clubs, fraternities and sororities, and judging teams are the final key to a balanced education. There is no better way to learn leadership and communication skills than through involvement in these activities. Clubs such as the Block and Bridle Club, the Dairy Science Club, and Students for Responsible Use of Animals emphasize hands-on experiences, whether with animals, advertising, or public relations. Penn State supports more than 400 student organizations and strongly encourages students to participate in at least one. These activities often provide invaluable contacts and networks for future employment opportunities.

The key to success in today's job market is flexibility. Balancing academics, work experience, and extracurricular activities provides this flexibility. People who can communicate well, work hard, and relate positively to others positively are going to be at the top of most employers' lists, no matter how the job market changes.

Flock Source Can Spell Satisfaction, Disaster

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Backyard poultry flocks offer homeowners in rural areas an opportunity to supplement family income, provide eggs and meat for the table, and help children learn to care for other living creatures.

But a budding backyard enterprise can turn quickly into disaster if diseases like Salmonella pullorum-typhoid and Mycoplasma — both highly contagious to poultry — are allowed to gain entry.

Such maladies often are fatal to chicks and cause unthriftiness and poor performance in young birds. Adult fowl can pass the diseases to other birds through their manure droppings and to their progeny through their eggs.

Keeping these diseases out of your flock is best accomplished by purchasing chicks and other poultry supplies only from approved sources, said Charles J. Wabeck, small flocks specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service, Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Approved sources, said Wabeck, are those that practice health and sanitation measures in their hatcheries and participate in pullorum breeder-flock testing programs specified by the National Poultry Improvement Plan (NPIP). NPIP was established 56 years ago by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with poultry health professionals.

To be on the approved list, hatcheries also must obtain their eggs from breeder flocks that have not had any serious disease outbreaks in recent years.

Newspaper and magazine advertisements normally do not indicate whether mail-order baby chicks come from approved sources, Wabeck said. And NPIP standards are not adequately enforced in some states.

Wabeck updates annually a Maryland Small Flock Source List, intended to protect the health of small flocks as well as the Delmarva area's important commercial broiler industry.

The list indicates approved sources of supply for several classes of poultry — including layers, meat birds, turkeys, guineas, waterfowl, and even fancy purebred poultry. It also provides information on purveyors of poultry equipment and supplies.

The Maryland Small Flock Source List is available free from offices of the cooperative extension service throughout the state. It also can be picked up at animal health laboratories of the Maryland Department of Agriculture. Or you may write to Dr. Charles J. Wabeck, Lower Eastern Shore Research and Education Center, Route 2-Box 229-A, Princess Anne, MD 21853.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM TWO RECENTLY HELD POULTRY CONFERENCES

William D. Weaver, Jr.
Prof. and Head
Dept. Of Poultry Science

The Department of Poultry Science at Penn State recently sponsored the Turkey Conference at the Embers Convention Center in Carlisle and the Poultry (broiler/commercial layer) Sales and Service Conference at The Nittany Lion Inn on the University Park Campus.

Even though many of the more technical subjects addressed the specific needs of the individual commodity groups, there were several topics that were common between the two programs.

Effective communications between the grower and the serviceperson is vital to the success of our industry and was addressed by a professional communicator and a panel of growers on each program. It was emphasized that communications is more than the use of words; it requires the transfer of information, understanding, and the proper follow-up to be successful.

The growers on each panel pointed out that their objective is to properly manage and care for their birds and that they appreciated servicepeople that were helpful and supportive. The growers indicated that they were also busy people but would like to visit with the serviceperson when he/she was on the farm (servicepeople desire this as well), and that possibly prior scheduling would help in some instances.

Growers are also interested in the bigger picture, which includes new technologies in production and marketing, news of happenings at the integrated company level and throughout the industry, and appreciate it when servicepeople keep them abreast in these areas.

Nutrient management was addressed by experts on both programs. The general consensus is that poultry manures, when not applied properly, can contribute to the contamination of ground and surface waters, and that impending legislation if (or more probably "when") enacted will have a profound effect on much of the poultry industry in the State.

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation and the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service are actively involved in this issue and are engaged in programs that support poultry producers and at the same time protect the environment.

Plans are being made to move the Turkey Conference from the spring to the fall, possibly October, and combine it with a similar conference in Virginia. Under the new format, the meeting would be held in Pennsylvania and Virginia in alternate years.

The Poultry Sales and Service Conference will continue as a spring conference being held on the University Park Campus of Penn State.

World Pork Expo In June

DES MOINES, Iowa — The fifth annual World Pork Expo will be held June 5-7 here at the Iowa State Fairgrounds.

An attendance of 50-60,000 people is expected at the three-day Expo, which will feature activities for both producers and consumers.

Producers are sure to enjoy swine breed shows, educational seminars, and the world-class, pork-specific trade show featuring the latest technology from more than 500 companies.

Consumers will delight in the Great Pork BarbeQlossal™, a spirited barbecue competition complete with samples of mouth-watering pork barbecue, sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health. Everyone can also learn about the new nutritional profile of fresh pork at the Pork Product Showcase, sponsored by Elanco Animal Health.

"World Pork Expo is not just an event. It is an experience that pork producers would have a hard time duplicating without attending hundreds of separate seminars and trade shows throughout the year," said World Pork Expo Manager Gary Slater.

The 1992 World Pork Expo will offer a variety of new activities such as an area designed to increase producer awareness of environmental issues currently facing the pork industry.

"This event will give producers some ideas and tools to use in dealing with the growing public interest in environmental matters and the environmental challenges that will affect pork producers in the future," said Slater.

Producers will be able to visit with experts about environmental laws and see demonstrations on new environmental technology and management techniques at the display, which is sponsored by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., with assistance from "PORK '92" magazine.

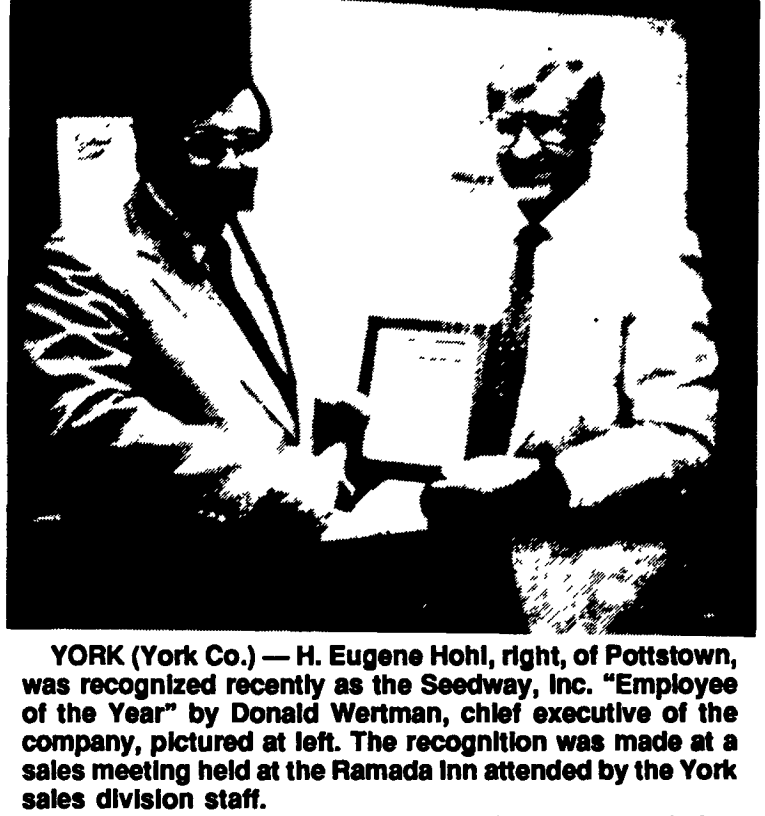
Employee Of Year



YORK (York Co.) — H. Eugene Hohl, right, of Pottstown, was recognized recently as the Seedway, Inc. "Employee of the Year" by Donald Wertman, chief executive of the company, pictured at left. The recognition was made at a sales meeting held at the Ramada Inn attended by the York sales division staff.

Hohl received a wall plaque as a token of appreciation for his contribution to the organization. He was selected by his peers who have been former recipients of the award.

The Kuhn GF 8501 MH Gyrotedder® features a wide body design that incorporates eight turning rotors. Each rotor features six tine arms for greater tedding and turning efficiency even when the unit is traveling at higher speeds.

Tedder Handles 20 Acres Per Hour

VERNON, N.Y. — A new 28-foot tedder, capable of tedding up to 20 acres/hour, is now available from Kuhn Farm Machinery.

The Kuhn GF 8501 MH Gyrotedder® features a wide body design that incorporates eight turning rotors. Each rotor features six tine arms for greater tedding and turning efficiency even when the unit is traveling at higher speeds.

Tedding minimizes the potential damage caused by wet weather to freshly mowed hay. The Gyrotedder's gentle fluffing action turns the hay, speeding up its natural drying time. Under optimum conditions, it is possible to mow and ted in the morning, rake in the afternoon, and bale that evening.

The GF 8501 MH is specifically designed for easier operation. A land-hugging, articulated frame offers maximum maneuverability in tight corners and on uneven ground. Additionally, a counteracting, adjustable stabilizer aids straight line operation at high speeds on hillsides or in very dense crops. When turning, the stabilizer also keeps the machine in line with the tractor without affecting the mobility of the 3-point frame. Wheel heights adjust without the use of tools, to adapt rotor angle to changing crop density.

Kuhn's GF 8501 MH is equipped with the newly developed Digidrive® multiple finger coupling. This maintenance-free, positive drive system prevents damage if the PTO is engaged or the rotors raised accidentally. The Digidrive® coupling also makes the GF 8501 MH easy to transport and store. Outer rotors fold nearly 180°, making the unit extremely compact. Overall transport height is just 10 feet 6 inches and width is 9 feet 8 inches. All folding and locking functions are performed from the tractor seat for maximum safety and greater operating efficiency.

In addition to the 28-foot GF 8501 MH, Kuhn Gyrotedders are also available in 10-foot, 13-foot, 17-foot, 20-foot and 23-foot models, the largest selection of sizes available by any manufacturer. As with the GF 8501 MH, all Kuhn Gyrotedders fold for easier transport and storage.

For more information, contact Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., P.O. Box 224, Vernon, NY 13476, (315) 829-2620.

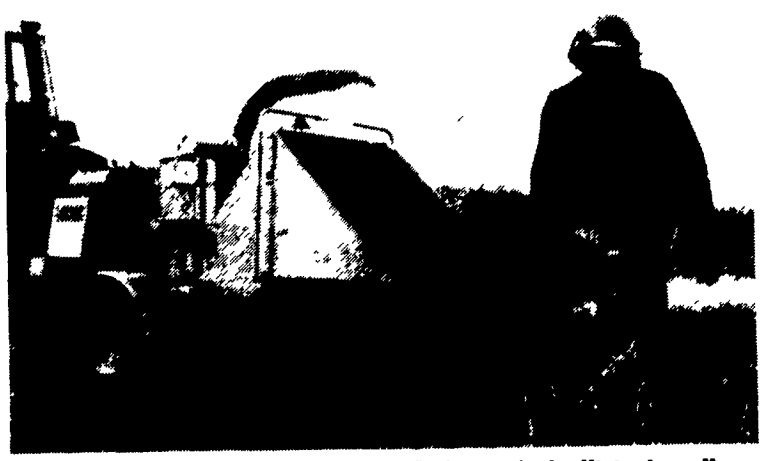
Brush Chipper Has Large Appetite

PELLA, Iowa — A new mid-range, disc-style brush chipper with automatic self-feed and a choice of two power selections is available from Vermeer Manufacturing Co.

The new Vermeer 935 Brush Chipper is built to handle brush, limbs, and construction debris up to 9 inches in diameter. The unit comes equipped with an 18-inch diameter, self-feeding, hydraulically controlled feed roller with a variable speed range of 0 to 247 fpm; a discharge chute which is capable of swinging up to 270 degrees (and requires no tools for repositioning); and a heavy-duty, "waist-high" feed table that eliminates the need to bend over or stoop down for low-angle feeding. It also folds up for transport and better security when not in use.

The 68-inch length of the table to the feed rollers also provides an extra measure of distance from the feeding action. the 10-inch x 10-inch feed opening leads to a 1½ -inch thick cutting disc that measures 30 inches in diameter and holds two steel-hardened knives. Cutter wheel speed is 1,300 rpm.

The 2,800-pound unit comes with a standard 35 hp Wisconsin air-cooled gas engine or an optional 42 hp Deutz F3L-1011 air-cooled diesel. Additional features include a 15-gallon fuel tank, electric or hydraulic surge brakes, lockable toolbox, and battery box.



The new Vermeer 935 Brush Chipper is built to handle brush, limbs, and construction debris up to 9 inches in diameter. The unit comes equipped with an 18-inch diameter, self-feeding, hydraulically controlled feed roller with a variable speed range of 0 to 247 fpm.

Agway Hosts Dairy Seminars

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — More than 175 western and central New York dairy farmers, owners of 26,000 of the state's highest producing dairy cows, attended day-long seminars recently in Batavia and Tully devoted to dairy herd efficiency and prosperity.

Hosted by Agway, Inc. and co-sponsored by Church & Dwight Co., these seminars presented the most up-to-date technical information on feeding and managing high producing herds.

The one-day programs featured prominent dairy researchers from both academic and corporate research groups. The sessions included:

• "Practical Aspects of Protein and Carbohydrate Nutrition in Dairy Rations," presented by Dr. James Nocek, Agway director, dairy research and applied technology.

• "New Technologies in Reproductive Management," presented by Dr. Ray Nebel, extension dairy scientist from Virginia Tech.

• "Body Condition of the Dairy Cow as Related to Stage of Lactation and Genetics," presented by Dr. Lee Majeskie, associate professor from the University of Maryland.

• "High Energy Rations: Fat Sources to Power the Early Lactation Cow," presented by Dr. Ken Cummings, Church & Dwight's director of technical service and research for agricultural products.

Attendance at the seminars was by invitation for dairy farmers with higher than 18,000 pounds per year rolling herd average.

"The challenge is to remove as many of the limits to greater milk production as we can," said Dick Stowe, Agway marketing manager, "And that requires cooperation between dairymen, producers like Church & Dwight, and cooperatives like Agway."

Dairy Herd Efficiency and Prosperity Dairy Seminar was hosted by Agway, Inc.

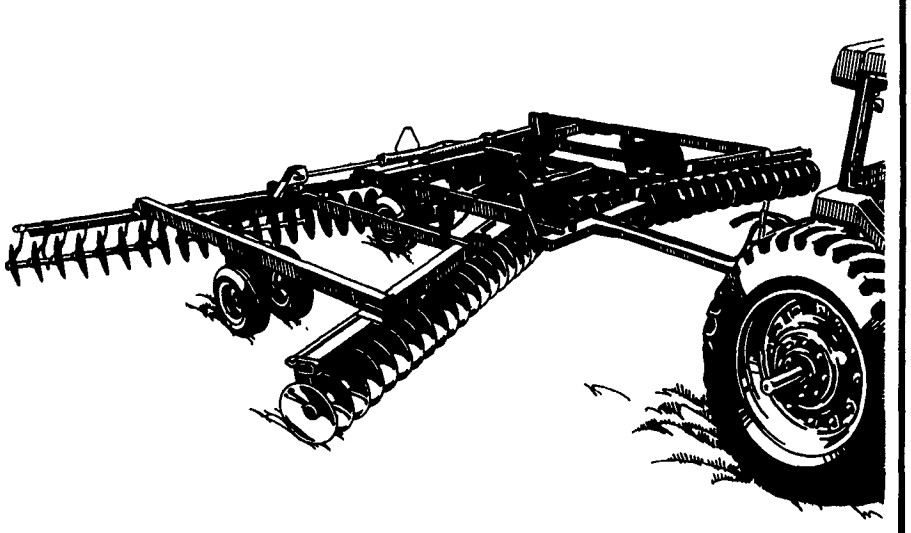
The 3900 flex-wing... good news for today's farming.



It's time to take a new look at disk harrows. Especially the new Case International 3900 flex-wing disk harrow. It's the easiest-pulling, levelest-working disk harrow you can hook up to today's high-horsepower tractors.

Here's how the 3900 meets performance, reliability and durability challenges like nothing else in the field:

- It offers superior gang strength from a massive welded tubular unibody frame — good for years of trouble-free operation.
- A unique self-leveling spring-loaded hitch transfers weight between tractor and disk to maintain ground-hugging performance regardless of ridges and gullies. The 3900 stirs and mixes soil, chemicals and residue consistently — even at high operating speeds. This promotes uniform germination.
- A new mechanical stop depth control elminiates variances common with master/slave systems. It's great for uniform incorporation.
- Earth Metal® crimp-center blades give you sharp penetration and an easy pull that saves fuel. Plus extra durability that means fewer replacements.

What more good news? Stop in today.

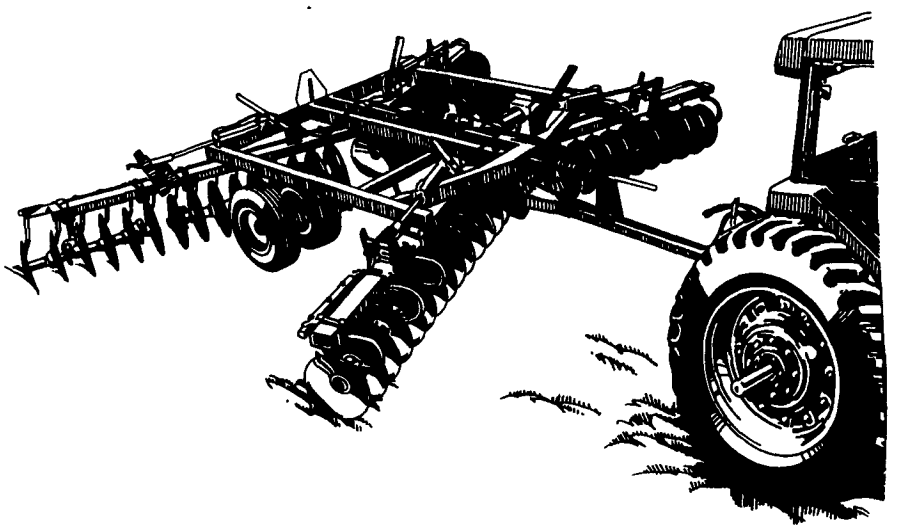
Midsize Giant



Meet the new Case International 3800 tandem disk harrow — a precision performer built for high-powered farming well beyond its midsize class.

Big-disk features include a unique self-leveling spring-loaded hitch that transfers weight between tractor and disk harrow to maintain consistent ground-hugging performance on uneven terrain. Just what you need for consistent yields.

The 3800 also has a new mechanical stop depth control that eliminates variances common with master/slave systems. And a crank adjustment for easy fine-tuning of front-to-back leveling. Great for uniform incorporation of chemicals and residues.

The Case International name means you also get exclusive Earth Metal® blades for sharp penetration and easy pull that save you fuel. Plus extra durability that saves you money with fewer replacements.

Check out the 3800 giant. Stop in today.

Start Farm Equipment The Right Way

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — As warm weather approaches, farmers are readying equipment for the planting season.

Operators should use correct and safe procedures when starting tractors and other machinery during this busy season, said a specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Vehicles and machinery that have been idle during winter may be difficult to start," said Sam Steel, senior project associate in agricultural and biological engineering and director of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council.

"If you need to jump-start a piece of equipment that has a weak or discharged battery, be sure to follow some important steps," he said.

Begin by connecting the positive cable, denoted by "+" or red clamps, to the positive terminal of the weakened battery. Then clamp the other end of the positive cable to the positive post of a charged battery.

When connecting the negative cable, denoted by "-" or black clamps, start by attaching a clamp to the negative post of the good battery. "Then make the last connection of the negative jumper cable to the engine block or frame of the nonstarting vehicle," Steel said. "The engine block or frame acts as a negative terminal, and keeping distance between the positive and negative clamps on the weakened battery reduces the likelihood of unwanted stray sparks at either battery, causing a fire or an explosion."

To protect themselves from flying battery parts or acid in the event of an accident, workers always should wear safety glasses when jump-starting vehicles.

"If battery acid does contact human skin, it should be flushed off immediately with clean, cool water," Steel said. "The eyes are especially vulnerable to battery acid. If they should get splashed, flush them with clean water and seek treatment by medical personnel."

Once the vehicle is started, remove the jumper cables in reverse order. "Don't let the cables contact each other during removal," Steel said. "The resulting sparks could ignite grease, oil or fuel residues and cause serious and expensive fire damage." Store jumper cables in a clean and dry location.

Farmers eager to save time in the field may place themselves in danger by cutting comers when starting their equipment.

"When you start your tractor without using the normal starting system, you're guilty of bypass starting," Steel said. "Although tractor manufacturers place warning signs on tractors to discourage bypass starting, too many farmers continue this dangerous practice."

Bypass starting a tractor is roughly equivalent to hot-wiring a car. "A tractor driver will leave the operator's station or tractor seat for some reason, then will need to start the tractor. Instead of climbing back up, the operator may use a screwdriver or knife blade to eliminate the need for the ignition switch. Placing the metal blade over the two terminals of the starter relay switch creates a mutual contact, which can start the equipment."

Tractors and vehicles accidentally left in gear immediately will lurch and can run over the person attempting the bypass start. "Never use this method of starting equipment," Steel said. "The results are all too often disastrous.

"Always start your tractor from the operator's station, with the tractor in neutral or park, and follow the correct starting procedures in your tractor's manual."

Pioneer Seeks Approval For Pa. Field Test

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has applied for approval from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to conduct a Pennsylvania field test of alfalfa genetically engineered to provide resistance to Alfalfa Mosaic Virus (AMV).

The gene for AMV resistance has been tested in several varieties of alfalfa since September 1989 at the Pioneer research farm in Johnston, Iowa, and last summer at the Company's research station in Connell, Washington.

This spring Pioneer proposes to again test in Iowa and Washington, and to expand the testing to research stations at Quarryville, Pennsylvania; Arlington, Wisconsin; and Woodland, California. The tests would last four years to enable collection of data on yield, regrowth and hardiness. Four years is the typical commercial lifespan of alfalfa stands.

"Expansion of the testing with this alfalfa is necessary to examine performance under actual growing conditions and practices in the five locations that best represent the different growing environments for alfalfa," said Dr. Tim Woodward, Pioneer director of alfalfa breeding.

"This will be our third summer working with this alfalfa in the field," Woodward said. "The first two years of this field test we've been most interested in evaluating the level of disease protection given to these plants. We collected some yield data last summer in the Iowa test. Now it's time to compare yields of the resistant plants with yields of commercial and experimental varieties over a longer period and geographical spread.

"We've also been breeding the AMV resistance gene into improved, hardier varieties more closely approximating commercial stock," Woodward said. "Our ultimate goal is to provide farmers with high-performing varieties that are profitable."

Standard agricultural practices will be employed to manage the plants, Woodward said. Fertilizer and pesticides will be applied as required, and the plants will be irrigated. The alfalfa will be mowed about every three weeks using a commercial mowing machine. Test weights for each variety will be recorded. Then the clippings will be composted.

The manner in which the plants will be challenged by AMV also will be realistic. The plants will not be inoculated with the disease, as is often the case in agricultural research. Instead, the alfalfa will catch or resist AMV just as they would in any farmer's field, Woodward said.

"Aphids and harvesting equipment play significant roles in spreading AMV on most farms," he said, "so our test will allow that kind of transmission to take place.

"It is essential to subject these plants to natural infection in the field. We then measure the level of resistance and the yields to determine the commercial potential of the plants."

"Decisions regarding possible commercial introduction of proprietary varieties will depend on varietal development and results of these field tests," he said. "That decision remains several years away."

Preliminary results indicate the gene offers good protection against the virus. In the earlier tests, 35 percent of plants without the gene had the disease after inoculation with AMV, but less than 1 percent of the transformed plants displayed symptoms.

"Field testing is a routine part of product development in agriculture," Woodward said. "It's an essential step in the research process — for both traditional and biotech products — because it allows plant scientists to study new lines and varieties under conditions that simulate actual farming practices."

In the seed industry, thousands of field tests are conducted around the U.S. each year. When field research involves genetically engineered plants, the tests are closely monitored by federal and state regulators.

Dr. Rod Townsend, Pioneer director of regulatory affairs, said that while APHIS is reviewing the company's requests for the field test permits, state regulatory officials in Pennsylvania and the other four states will be conducting a similar review. The company's Institutional Biosafety Committee, which critically examines all genetic engineering procedures at Pioneer, also reviews the test protocols and details, Townsend noted.

Alfalfa Mosaic Virus is a widely occurring alfalfa disease that stunts or weakens plants, reducing yield and the productive life of an alfalfa stand, Woodward explained.

Most alfalfa stands in farmers' fields contain plants infected with AMV. In stands more than 2 years old it is possible to find 72 percent or more of plants are infected with AMV, Woodward said.

Researchers estimate AMV has caused yield reductions of up to 40 percent on some alfalfa varieties in greenhouse experiments, and an average 10 percent in field trials.

Pioneer presently markets 13 proprietary alfalfa varieties, five alfalfa blends and five forage mixes that include alfalfa, as well as an alfalfa hay inoculant.

Hatfield Scholarship To Armison

ALFRED, N.Y. — A senior in the animal husbandry curriculum at Alfred State College of Technology is the winner of a $1,000 scholarship from the Hatfield Packing Co.

Travis J. Armison, son of James and Linda Armison of Fillmore RD 2 and a 1990 graduate of Fillmore Central School, will be cited at the college's eighth annual honors convocation May 3.

Armison was active in 4-H as a youngster, and was a member of Future Farmers of America (FFA) in high school. He is a candidate for an associate's degree from Alfred State in May and plans to work toward a bachelor's degree in the agriculture field.

In appreciation for the college's commitment to the livestock and meat industry, Hatfield annually provides two $1,000 scholarships to agriculture students who have career plans to enter the industry.

The second 1992 scholarship will go to an incoming freshman in Alfred State's School of Agriculture and Allied Health Technologies, yet to be named.

Presentation of the award to Armison was by Scott Acomb, manager of Smiling Porker Farms in Whitesville, a 500-sow, farrow-to-finish, facility owned by Hatfield. Acomb is a 1989 graduate of Alfred State, having majored in agricultural business.

Draft Animals, Farmers Team Up In Contest

ACCORD, N.Y. — It's almost time to put the crops in, and Shellbark Farm is celebrating with a Spring Plow on April 25-26, sponsored by The Hudson Valley Draft Horse Association.

Teamsters will bring draft horses (Percherons, Belgians, and English Shires), oxen, and mules to the farm on Route 209 in Accord, N.Y., for two days of fun, competition, and just plain showing off. The tradition dates back to county fairs before the advent of the tractor, when farmers brought the horses they used in the fields to compete and determine which team had the best skills.

"You look for how the team works together and the teamster's ability to drive horses and work the equipment," said Rick Gray, one of this year's competitors and the owner of two Belgians at Shellbark Farm, a living history museum devoted to the preservation of turn-of-the-century farming practices.

The judges also look at the depth and straightness of the furrow and whether the sod is completely turned over, which prepares the earth for easy planting. The categories to be judged include single horse class, team class with a walk-behind plow, team class with a sulky plow, three-abreast sulky, four-abreast sulky, and the gang plow with four to six horses.

The two-day event runs from 10 a.m.-6 p.m., and will also feature horse-drawn wagon rides for the kids and a log skidding contest through a serpentine course.

Watch demonstrations on plowing, discing, smithing, hoopmaking, and spinning. The Friends of Historic Rochester will have a historical display in the farmhouse, and local artisans will have crafts for sale.

There will be good food at good prices, including barbecued chicken. Admission is free, with a parking of $2 per car. For more information or photos, leave your name and number on the answering machine at Shellbark Farm (914) 626-5128.

NFU Applauds Call For Food Reserve

DENVER, Colo. — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson recently voiced support for European Community Agricultural Commissioner Ray MacSharry's call for the creation of a world food security stockpile.

"Commissioner MacSharry has every reason to be concerned there may not be sufficient commodity reserves for relief in the event of a famine or natural disaster," said Swenson.

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has a standing recommendation that to ensure global food security, total grain stocks should not be allowed to drop below 17-18 percent of the anticipated consumption in the year ahead.

MacSharry predicts that by the middle of 1992, grain stocks will be at 17 percent of expected consumption. Some experts also predict a rise in world population by as much as one billion by the next decade, which would further tax food resources.

In a letter to United States Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan, Swenson urged the ag secretary to follow MacSharry's lead in calling for such a plan. Swenson cited NFU's General Agreement on Production and Prices plan, released in 1988 at the onset of the Uruguay Round of the GATT negotiations.

Swenson said, "The cost of maintaining world grain and food reserves should be shared so that the specter of famine and shortages can be banished." Swenson contends that such a reserve would prevent any single nation from having to exclusively shoulder the burden of famine relief.

In his letter to Secretary Madigan, Swenson said, "It has been five years since we released our GAPP proposal, and now there is an even greater need to protect world food security through the establishment of a grain stockpile or reserve."

Swenson urged Madigan to use his ability as a world leader and demonstrate foresight and leadership by calling for the establishment of a tool which could prevent suffering throughout many nations because of malnutrition and starvation.

Control Compaction Before It Affects Crops

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Most crop scouts will tell you that early detection is the key to pest management. The rationale: the earlier you detect a potential problem, the more options you have to control it.

For Clarence Keener, this same concept applies for preventing soil compaction.

"Soil compaction gained a lot of attention in this area about three years ago," said Keener, who farms on heavy clay soils near Manheim. "I began to routinely check for signs of compaction during my normal scouting trips in my field."

Although Reener's records didn't show a yield decline, he did notice some symptoms of compaction, such as unusually high soil crusting and uneven crop emergence in some areas of his fields.

"I knew there was some compaction in my fields, but I wasn't sure of the severity," Keener said. "I planned to control the problem before it affected my yields."

Keener sought advice from Ed Lazowski, agronomist for Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc., in Mount Joy. Upon evaluation, Lazowski recommended that Reener use a subsoiler on certain sections of his farm to break up compacted areas.

"Since I began using the subsoiler two years ago I haven't noticed any compaction problems," said Keener. "I also reduce trips across my fields whenever possible.

"I'm convinced that the best way control compaction is to not let it become a problem," said Keener. "I check my fields routinely with a penetrometer and observe soil and plant conditions throughout the growing season."

A subsoiler treatment isn't recommended for everyone, however. Lazowski said that when farmers suspect soil compaction in their fields, they must first determine what type compaction exists before considering a treatment.

"There are different types of soil compaction: soil crusting, plow pan, and sidewall," said Lazowski. "If you're too late to prevent compaction, it's important to identify which type affects your field."

Soil crusting affects the top few inches, or the surface structure of the soil. This usually results from overpreparation of the seed bed during the spring and causes slow crop emergence.

Lazowski said rotary hoeing will usually help eliminate a soil crust.

Plow pan compaction results in serious damage to the soil structure, or pores, by slowing soil water movement throughout the top nine inches. Excessive water is often present throughout the field when this problem develops.

"I check my fields routinely with a penetrometer and observe soil and plant conditions throughout the growing season," said Keener.

Shallow roots, short plants, and uneven stands are some of the problems caused by plow pan compaction. Soil nitrogen is also lost due to denitrification under waterlogged conditions.

"Plow pan compaction results from running heavy equipment on wet soils," said Lazowski. "A deep subsoiler or chisel plowing is the only way to treat plow pan compaction. If not controlled, it can greatly reduce crop performance."

A study at Purdue University showed compaction reduces corn stands 20 to 30 percent, plant height a third to one half, and yield by about 19 percent.

Randall Reeder, Ohio State University agricultural engineer, estimates that over a 10-year period, farmers can expect a 10 to 15 percent yield loss from serious compaction. In addition, he said yield reductions as great as 50 percent can occur in any one year.

Sidewall compaction occurs when fields are planted too wet and furrows don't close properly. This creates a compaction zone around the seed, as the wet ground forces the coulters to compact the seed walls.

Poor crop emergence and malformed root growth are generally the results of sidewall compaction, since the roots often grow in slices of soil instead of across the row.

Clarence Keener, right, sought advice from Ed Lazowski, agronomist for Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc., in Mount Joy. Upon evaluation, Lazowski recommended that Reener use a subsoiler on certain sections of his farm to break up compacted areas.

According to Lynn Hoffman, tillage specialist at Penn State University, some soils are more susceptible to compaction than others. He said soils with poor water holding abilities, low organic matter, and uniform texture are most likely to compact.

"While any soil will compact, some soils have high compaction tendencies even under natural conditions," said Hoffman. "Usually, the higher the clay content, the more dramatic the compaction problem.

"Increasing organic matter levels in the soil with cover crops, crop residue, and rotation cropping will help reduce the susceptibility for soil compaction," he said.

Hoffman said normal cropping practices such as spreading manure or harvesting silage can also lead to increased soil compaction. He recommends buying tandem axles with flotation rubber for manure spreaders and silage wagons.

"Reducing your axle load will reduce your potential for compaction," Hoffman said. "In addition, our research shows that using an offset disk always creates increased soil compaction. Field cultivators or combination tillage tools are usually preferable on soils highly susceptible to compaction."

Lazowski concludes that even soils with natural compaction abilities can be managed, "especially if farmers stay off them when they're wet."

As Keener puts it, "Compaction is no different than any other problem. It's best controlled by regularly checking your fields."

Fans Have Cone Design

LANSING, Mich. — Using a new efficiency-boosting discharge cone design and high-density fiberglass construction, Aerotech, Inc., has developed new versions of its 36-inch and 48-inch Advantage fans to give swine and poultry producers and greenhouse operators the best in performance and reliability.

In addition to giving complete corrosion protection, the high-density fiberglass weighs less, yet is more rugged. A higher concentration of glass fibers makes the housing and cone of an Advantage fan more durable and flexible to prevent chipping, cracking, and breaking. This greater overall strength of the material means overall thickness can be reduced, which decreases its weight.

Aerotech has developed new versions of its 36-inch and 48-inch Advantage fans that have a new efficiency-boosting discharge cone design and high-density fiberglass construction.

The exclusive discharge cone design increases fan efficiency. Better fan efficiency means lower electricity costs to move a given volume of air.

In the 1992 BESS Lab testing, Aerotgech's 1-horsepower, 48-inch Advantage fiberglass fan outdistanced the competition by moving 23,800 cubic feet of air per minute (CFM) at an efficiency of 21.3 CFM/watt. The 1½ -hp, 48-inch fiberglass Advantage fan moved 26,300 CFM at an efficiency of 17.5 CFM/watt. Testing was done at 0.04 inches of static pressure with all shutters and guards in place.

The higher airflow per fan reduces total fan requirements in buildings, resulting in system design savings and lower operating costs.

The 48-inch Advantage fan is belt-driven and features Aero-Link™ belts that deliver longer, maintenance-free life. It is available with either a 1 or 1½ horsepower motor. The 36-inch Advantage fan is available as either a belt-drive or direct-drive and has a ½ horsepower motor.

Mild Winter Could Mean Pest Problems

NEWARK, Del. — For the second year in a row, above-normal winter temperatures have favored the survival of many crop pests. This means farmers must be alert for possible heavy pressure from a wide gamut of overwintering insects this spring.

It's too soon to tell if this pressure will materialize, however, said Joanne Whalen, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension pest management specialist.

"Each year is different," she said. "And spring conditions are as important as winter conditions."

Last year, for example, the mild winter was followed by a early spring warm-up and dry conditions that were ideal for some pests. Some farmers were taken by surprise when their late-planted vegetables were hit hard by corn earworms.

Pressure was also heavy from Colorado potato beetles on potatoes and European corn borer on snapbeans.

What can producers do to make sure they don't get clobbered this season?

"Learn from last year," said Whalen. "Be sure to scout your fields. Be aware of how weather — including rainfall, temperature, and humidity — affects pests and predators, because the populations will be present."

Whalen encourages growers to learn the biology and life histories of major crop pests.

An early spring warm-up followed by cool, wet weather in May, for example, usually favors aphids in small grains. And aphids are the vector for barley dwarf yellow mosaic virus.

The grass sawfly is another pest to watch for in small grains. The wasp-like adult emerges in early April. An early spring warm-up will favor a flurry of egg-laying activity.

Weather conditions this spring will also determine the amount of pressure wheat growers can expect from the true armyworm. "This pest overwinters as a mature larva," Whalen said. "It's favored by dry weather in the fall and a mild winter." In a cool, wet spring, its natural enemies will lag behind egg-laying activity. Black-light traps can help monitor moth activity. Watch larvae size, since small larvae are easier to control before they clip grain heads.

Watch out for the European corn borer in field corn and corn earworm in soybeans. The mild, dry winter set the stage for both insects to be problems.

"Heavy rains, wind, and cool nights during mating and egg laying could help reduce corn borer populations," Whalen said. "The earliest-planted corn will be most vulnerable. Fields need to be scouted."

Flea beetles may present problems in sweet corn. This insect is the vector for Stewart's Wilt. Whalen advises using a soil insecticide on susceptible varieties. It may also be necessary to scout and treat with a foliar spray.

The Colorado potato beetle also promises to have survived the winter well. An early spring warm-up could spell problems for potato farmers, especially if this year is like last year.

"At temperatures above 85 degrees F," Whalen said, "this insect can go from egg stage to large larvae in three days."

On The Hand Of Peace There Rests An Apple

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Five Pennsylvania apple growers and packers have donated more than 40,000 pounds of apples to hospitals and schools in St. Petersburg, Russia, according to Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff.

"We're delighted that these apple growers are willing to share a part of their crop with Russian citizens who face food shortages," Wolff said, adding that the airlift provides "an example of the quality and nutritional value of Pennsylvania's agricultural products to people in distant lands."

The growers and packers are Hess Brothers Fruit Co., Leola, Lancaster County; Rice Fruit Co., Gardners; El Vista Orchard Inc., Fairfield; Bream Orchard Inc., Orrtanna; and Mountain Orchard Cooperative Inc., Aspers. John Rice of Rice Fruit Co. coordinated the donation.

"We had been reading articles about the situation in general in the former Soviet Union, and it made us all concerned," Rice said. "We wanted to try to help and demonstrate friendship from the American people."

Rice noted that it had been ". . . a good apple year, with a good crop of apples. We thought it would be a good gesture."

The Pennsylvania Fruit and Vegetable Inspection Association inspected, graded, and issued export certificates for the Rome and Red Delicious apples.

Du Pont Gets Patent For Soybean Gene

WILMINGTON, Del. — The first U.S. patent for a soybean gene has been issued to Du Pont Agricultural Products. The new gene increases the soybean plant's natural tolerance for sulfonylurea herbicides.

(Examples of such herbicides are "Classic" and "Pinnacle.")

The trademark "STS" will be used to identify the sulfonylurea tolerance trait and new soybean varieties that contain the trait.

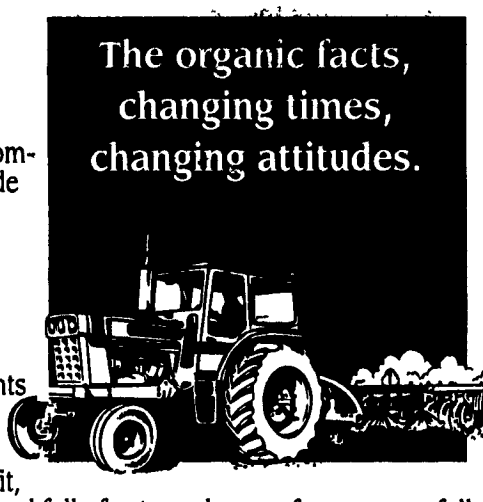
"STS" soybeans are expected to give farmers more weed control options that are safe to the soybean crop and compatible with the environment.

"Sulfonylurea herbicides provide effective weed control at fractions of an ounce per acre, and they can be used to replace conventional herbicides applied at pounds per acre," said inventor Scott Sebastian.

Du Pont has shared the gene with leading North American seed companies to breed the "STS" trait into seed lines that exhibit superior agronomic traits.

The first "STS" varieties will be available in 1993. Widespread commercial availability is expected by 1995.

How do benefits from organic farming methods keep your yields high? Or increase them?



Erth-Rite is composted soil conditioner made from a scientific blend of animal, mineral, plant and marine products. These ingredients, collected from around the world for their farming quality and purity, provide all the basic nutrients your plants need for immediate growth.

For long term benefit, Erth-Rite fertilizers are packed full of extremely beneficial living bacteria as a result of our composting process. When applied to your fields, these bacteria release minerals and trace elements, fix nitrogen from the air, and hold nutrients in the soil where plants can use them for months.

Measurable benefits

Farmers who use the Erth-Rite program report:

- Higher nutrition levels in animal feed. Reduces the need for costly supplements.
- Healthier animals and a reduction in vet bills.
- Plants withstand the effects of drought. Last year, in counties of Pennsylvania that were declared a disaster area because of drought, Erth-Rite farmers reported normal yields.
- And when you use Erth-Rite organic fertilizer you don't have to worry about personal safety and liability issues because the product is natural and 100% safe.

Excellent results

In the past, farmers have been concerned that if they switch to organic farming methods their crops will not yield as much.

Rest easy. Farmers around the county and across the country have seen that crops grown with Erth-Rite have yields equal to crops grown in chemical fertilizer. In fact, many farmers have reported increases in yield.

Ask the experts

At Erth-Rite, we have the products you've been looking for and the know-how to help you farm successfully with organic fertilizers. And we've been helping farmers for over 30 years. When you call, you'll find we are a personable and well organized company ready to assist you.

Seminars—every winter we offer a soils class that shows you how to run a successful organic program and what you can expect in crop improvements. Give us a call to reserve a seat.

Now is the time to try Erth-Rite

We don't expect you to believe everything you read and make a 100% change over night. But we do want you to give us a try—a one-field test plot. You'll see for yourself that organic farming with Erth-Rite produces excellent results. So talk to us about planning for this year or next.

We'll need the results of a soil test. For your convenience we have our own lab, but we'll be happy to work with any other scientific analysis.

We have bins and spreaders for rent and we also do custom spreading. Give us a call for more information and the name of your nearest dealer.

Penn State Winter Course Graduates Honored

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Penn State University's College of Agricultural Sciences recently held ceremonies for 40 people who graduated through two of the college's Winter Course programs for managing turfgrass and orgnamental nurseries.

The two courses have difficult entry prerequisites including employment in the field studied and good prior academic records.

Since the courses were started in 1957 and 1958, just more than 500 have graduated through the ornamental course, while barely more than 1,000 have successfully completed the turfgrass management course.

The ornamental course has been terminated. The eight who graduated are the last.

According to the PSU winter course officials, followup on past graduates of both courses has shown that more than 90 percent of those completing the winter courses are still working in directly related fields.

Students who received special recognition for academic acheivement include Patrick Ziagos of Scranton, who was named outstanding student in the Turgrass Management course. Ziagos maintain a perfect 4.0 grade point average during three terms of study.

A 1971 graduate of Lackawanna Trail High School in Factoryville, he attended the University of Scranton and has worked for the Country Club of Scranton, in Clarks Summit, since 1988.

Eric S. Stickler, of Elizabethtown, was named outstanding student in the Ornamental Nursery Management Program. Stickler graduated with a 3.87 grade point average over the three terms.

A 1988 graduate of Elizabethtown Area High School, he attended Millersville State University for one year and has worked at Stark's Landscaping in Mount Joy since 1990.

The two awards were presented by MeeCee Baker, president of the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences Alumni Society.

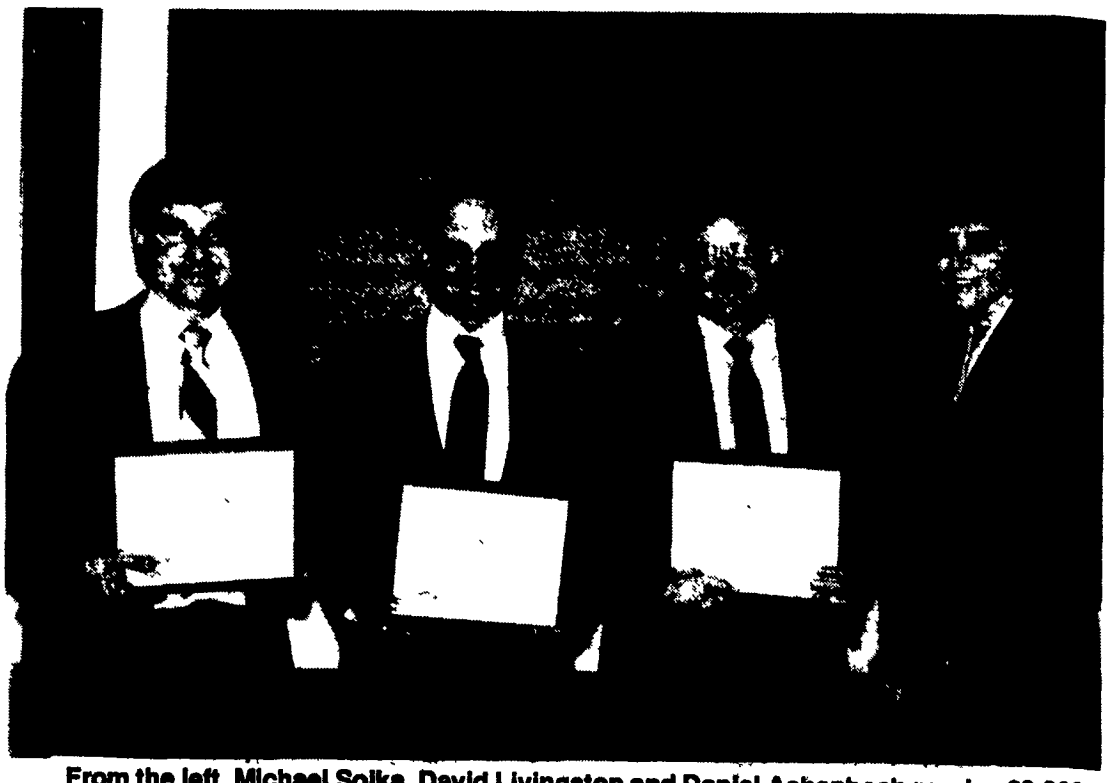
In other recognition, three people received $2,000 scholarships from the Pennsylvania Turfgrass Council for their academic achievement in the Turfgrass Managment Technical Program.

The recipients, all from Pennsylvania, were Michael Soika, of Centre Hall, David Livingston, of Boswell, and Daniel Achenbach, of Cornwall. The scholarships were presented by Christine King, executive director of the turfgrass council.

The turfgrass council is a nonprofit educational organization dedicated to the improvement of the turfgrass industry. Its intent is to organize all those in turfgrass into one strong organization that is representative of the entire industry.

The council has supported Penn State's programs in turfgrass research, teaching and extension since 1955. In return, personnel from the turfgrass project at Penn State have served as advisors to the council.

Graduating from the oranamental nursery management course with highest distinction were Anthony Hochschwender, Stephen John Olock and Strickler. Graduating with high distinction was Amanda Jean Caton. Graduating with distinction were Richard Gentile and Michael Haigwood.



From the left, Michael Soika, David Livingston and Daniel Achenbach receive $2,000 scholarships for high academic achievement in the PSU Turfgrass Management Technical Program. Presenting the scholarships, on the right, is Christine King, representing the Pennsylvania Turfgrass Council.

Graduating from the turfgrass course with highest distinction were Patrick Ziagos and David Livingston, with distinction were Robert Barr, Ralph Clark III, James Deem Jr., Dan Hemmerle, Thomas LaPlante, Patrick Clement Shay, and Michael Soika. Graduating with distinction were Achenbach, Jeffrey Cuny, Blair Hawkins Jr., Kevin Hicks, Kevin McGuire, with David Solga.

The graduation was made more special because it was the last class to be taught by Dr. Donald Waddington, professor emeritus of soil science. As a going-away, retirement gift, the class presented him with an airline ticket to Florida, where his grandchildren reside.

Also retiring was Dr. Joseph Duich, professor of turfgrass science.

Quality Haylage Requires Fine-Tuned Management

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — High yields and excellent feeding value make alfalfa haylage the crop of choice for many dairy farmers, but proper management is critical or those advantages can soon be lost.

"Alfalfa is naturally low in carbohydrates, which are important for adequate fermentation. And the high buffer capacity of alfalfa complicates the process even further. This means that pH levels often are too high for optimal feed quality and preservation," said Dr. Larry Carver, research manager for Cargill's Molasses Liquid Products Division.

Research shows that efficient haylage fermentation requires a minimum of six percent of readily fermentable carbohydrates on a dry matter basis. It's often difficult to achieve that level because not only is alfalfa naturally low in fermentable carbohydrates, but the amount varies greatly depending on its maturity and moisture content at harvest, the time of day it is cut, and the air temperature. Harvest-management practices such as proper chopping, packing, and sealing also affect feed quality, said Carver.

Because of these quality variables, Carver suggests that producers consider using silage additives to improve fermentation and preserve feed quality.

"The readily fermentable carbohydrates in products like our Mol-Mix LHA Liquid Haylage Additive help speed the fermentation process by providing food for lactic-acid bacteria. The result is that more nutrients are preserved for increased feed palatability and digestibility. This in turn can promote improved consumption for improved production," said Carver.

When alfalfa is harvested at a moisture level of 65 percent and sound silage management practices are followed, research conducted at Kansas State University shows that dry matter preservation can be increased by five percent and an energy value increase of 10 percent is possible with the use of LHA applied at the recommended rate of 60 pounds per ton of haylage. Carver calculates that this can mean as much as an additional 254 pounds of milk per ton of haylage treated with these products.

He provides the following description of products available from Mol-Mix dealers that can assist producers in maximizing feed quality. Although the products are often used with haylage, they can also be used for the other silage and high-moisture crops that are described.

- Mol-Mix LHA 20 liquid haylage additive is a 20 percent protein product that is recommended for alfalfa, grasses and cereal grains as well as ground high-moisture shelled and ear corn.
- Mol-Mix LHA 20 Plus liquid haylage additive can be mixed with Liqui-Teem Fermentation Aid and applied to forages. It is used with the same crops as LHA 20.
- Mol-Mix LHA 60 liquid haylage additive is a 60 percent protein product that is recommended for cereal grains cut at the soft dough stage and ground high-moisture shelled and ear corn when extra readily fermentable carbohydrates are necessary and extra protein can be utilized.
- Mol-Mix Liqui-Teem fermentation aid is used to provide necessary levels of beneficial live bacteria. Using both LHA products and Liqui-Teem enhances the benefits derived from the LHA by further improving the rate of fermentation, said Carver.

Soybean Herbicide Tank-Mix Friendly

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — EPA has granted registration for Fusion Grass Pack, a postemergent soybean herbicide that scored high marks for annual grass control in Ohio State University trials.

Fusion, a grass herbicide, also worked well when broadleaf herbicides were added to the tank.

"Fusion is a premix of Fusilade and fenoxaprop herbicides," said Dane Bowers, market development representative for ICI Americas Inc., which produces Fusilade and Fusion. "When the two are premixed, we get excellent annual grass control at a relatively low rate of active ingredient."

In the Ohio trials, Fusion provided 100 percent control of giant foxtails at 27 and 35 days after treatment. When Basagran was added to Fusion, researchers measured 95 to 100 percent control of foxtail and velvetleaf.

According to product manager David Walton, grower cost for Fusion Grass Pack is expected to be on par with Poast and Assure II, at approximately $8 per acre. Unlike Poast and Assure, however, Fusion is labeled for use with a wide variety of postemergent broadleaf herbicides, including Reflex, Classic, Blazer, Basagran, and Pursuit.

"By tankmixing Fusion with a broadleaf herbicide, growers can save two says," said Walton. "They don't have to bump up the rate of Fusion to overcome antagonism, and they don't have to pay for the cost of a second trip over the field."

Overall, he predicts a 20 to 30 percent growth in the use of postemergent soybean herbicides thanks to the lower pricing structure for 1992.

The Best of the Best

The Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality coating represents the best of the best in the Wheeling Corrugating line of premium galvanized roofing and siding. Every panel that carries the 2 ounce coating assures you are getting the toughest, the most durable, the most corrosion resistant galvanized sheet available in today's marketplace.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality
Every Wheeling 2 oz. sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel, topped with an extra thick zinc coating, and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks. Build with a Wheeling 2 oz. sheet and you'll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that's been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years.

The Proof is in the Process
The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling's patented Cook-Norteman manufacturing process. This technology allows a more consistent quality product, and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion. The process takes more handling and more time, but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20-year performance warranty.

Dimensions and Specifications
If your building plans call for roofing and siding materials with exceptional corrosion resistance, minimum upkeep, and old-time toughness, you'll want to check the specs of Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality galvanized.
Gauge: 28
Lengths: Up to 40'
Steel: Full hard, 90,000 psi, cold rolled Wheeling-Pittsburgh carbon steel.
NOTE: • Premium Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality zinc coated natural roofing and siding will outlast painted, regular galvanized or galvalume in most applications!

Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Channeldrain as handsome as it is economical.

Poly Square Means Healthier Calves
All-Season Big Foot 5'x7'6"

The Poly Square Big Foot is constructed of Opaque material to eliminate the solar effect. It blocks out sunheat-not sunlight. Poly Square's inverted ribs and 5'(W)x7'6"(L) make it the biggest unit on the market today and extremely wind resistant. It has no pop rivets which means no breaks or cracks for snow and rain to sift in. The unit weighs 100 pounds plus manger & buckets. And Poly Square Big Foot is large enough so your calf can lay in the center, away from cold walls in the winter. Use Poly Square with our side feed station and bottle holder which is perfect for use with a fence in a more traditional setting.
New Side Hay Feeder — Made especially for Poly Square Big Foot, no other unit has this feature. Also has a center roof vent for better air movement.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm. John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

MEAT MATTERS MOST

HOME BRED lambs like these have been winning for me and my buyers in the Mid-Atlantic area. They LOOK GOOD. They HANDLE GOOD. They CUT GOOD. My latest triumph was Grand Champion carcass at the 1991 Keystone International Livestock Exposition. Check these stats.

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built
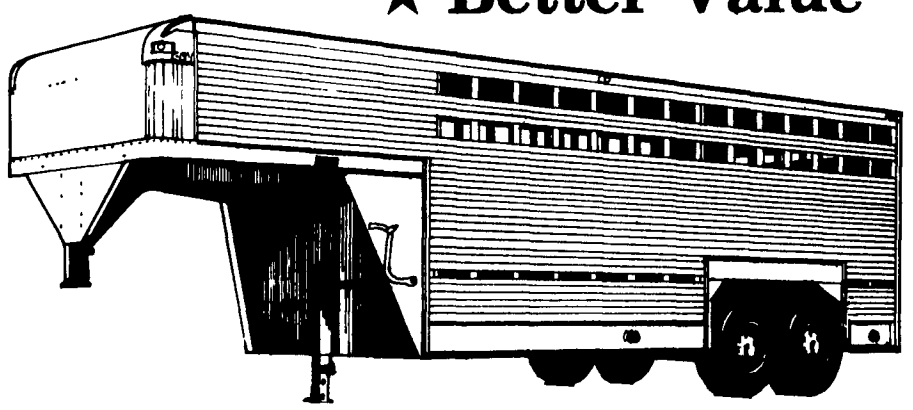
★ Better Value



The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications

- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

The Silage Additive Test

(Check Correct Answer)

☐ True ☐ False... Silage inoculants and silage additives are the same thing.

(Answer: False) Silage "inoculatns" are a type of silage additive that contain bacteria — sometimes alive and sometimes dead. SILO GUARD II contains no silage inoculant bacteria.

☐ True ☐ False... Alfalfa is one of the easiest crops to ensile.

(Answer: False) Alfalfa is a difficult crop to ensile. The protein, sugar and dry matter content can determine how successful your silage making will be.

☐ True ☐ False... You don't need to add a silage additive to your grass or alfalfa silage.

(Answer: False) With any silage fermentation, losses occur. Anything you can do to eliminate any loss will be of benefit to you. Effective and reputable silage additives are worth the investment.

☐ True ☐ False... SILO GUARD II can help you make "better" grass or alfalfa silage.

(Answer: True)
True — Silo Guard II reduces ensiling losses
True — Silo Guard II speeds bacterial acid production
True — Silo Guard II reduces ensiling temperatures
True — Silo Guard II prolongs the bulk life of silage
True — Silo Guard II makes good silage better

If you're not concerned about improving the quality of your silage this year — don't buy a silage additive

If you want to improve your silage quality this year, use SILO GUARD II

Tobacco Association Notes Trade Surplus

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Tobacco Merchants Association (TMA) announced that the U.S. tobacco industry registered a trade surplus of $4.8 billion in 1991.

The 1991 trade surplus was down $873.4 million or 15.4 percent from 1990's record trade surplus of $5.7 billion.

According to TMA, the lower trade surplus was due because of a decrease in the value of cigarette exports from $4.8 billion in 1990 to $4.2 billion in 1991 as well as an increase in the value of total tobacco imports from $818 million to $1.2 billion.

Farrell Delman, TMA president, said, "At $4.8 billion, the U.S. tobacco industry's trade surplus was the sixth largest contributor of all U.S. industries to the positive side of the nation's trade ledger." As in 1990, airplanes and airplane parts remained the top contributor at $26.9 billion, followed by chemicals (all), $18.8 billion; scientific instruments, $6.7 billion; specialized industrial machines, $5.6 billion; corn, $5.1 billion; and tobacco, $4.8 billion. While these industries had positive trade balance contributions, the U.S. imported overall some $66.2 billion more than it exported.

Though U.S. cigarette manufacturers exported a record 179.4 billion cigarettes in 1991, up from the 164.3 billion cigarettes exported in 1990, the export value of these shipments was down to $4.23 billion as compared to $4.76 billion in 1990. Delman attributed the decrease in export value to "price hedging, associated with the stronger U.S. dollar, coupled with a desire to penetrate financially strapped new American-blend markets with flagship brands."

TMA reported that the leading countries of destination for U.S. cigarette exports in 1991 were Japan (30 percent of total); Belgium (26.9 percent); Hong Kong (8.9 percent); Turkey (5.5 percent); Saudi Arabia (4.2 percent); United Arab Emirates (4.2 percent); the former USSR (2.6 percent); South Korea (2.2 percent); Singapore (1.9 percent); and Taiwan (1.8 percent).

"These ten destinations, none of which are ciassified as developing or less-developed countries, accounted for 88.3 percent of all cigarette shipments for this period," said Delman.

Substantial increases in U.S. cigarette exports have been realized in recent years due to the opening of the key Asian markets of Japan, Taiwan, South Korea, and Thailand and deeper penetration into markets in the Middle East. Exports have also been boistered by recent access to markets in Turkey and Eastern Europe, in particuiar the former Soviet Union.

"U.S. cigarette exports are now permitted to compete in growing markets formerly dominated by a single state monopoly," Delman said. "In order to compete against U.S. cigarettes, known for their high quality the worid over, our competitors are now required to use higher quality ingredients, including U.S. tobacco leaf."

Delman also noted that, at 499.3 million pounds, shipments of American grown leaf rose 6.8 million pounds in 1991. However, the value of these exports, at $1.43 billion, was down $12.8 million when compared to 1990.

Delaware Farms Receive Century Honors

DOVER, Del. — Six Delaware farm families received Century Farm awards during a ceremony this week in honor of having kept an operational farm in the family for 100 years or more.

Century Farm Awards are presented to families who have owned and operated a farm for at least 100 years. Farms must include at least 10 acres of the original parcel and generate a minimum income from the sale of agricultural products in order to qualify for the program.

The program is administered through the Department of Agriculture. Applicants are required to submit deeds and other documentation to the Century Farm Review Committee in order to be considered for the distinction. The committee consists of representatives from farm and historical organizations throughout the state.

Each Century Farm recipient received an engraved pewter tray and a large sign which can be displayed on the property to signify it is a Century Farm.

This year's recipients are:

• Joseph and Kathryne Mitchell, husband and wife, of Hockessin. Their farm dates back to 1796 and currently produces poultry, eggs, grain, sheep, mums, pumpkins, and Indian corn.

• Robert A. Beck and his sister-in-law, Brenda C. Beck, of Port Penn. Their farm dates back to 1863. It is the only farm among this year's recipients that does not generate over $10,000 in income from agricultural production, but the family derives some income from grain production, muskrat trapping and duck blind rentals.

• McColley Farms, owned by William H. McColley of Milford. This grain farm dates back to 1889.

• Beatrice H. McIlvaine and her daughter, Elaine M. Tobin, of Harbeson. The farm was originally purchased in 1861 and currently produces corn, soybeans, and factory beans.

• T. Noble Jurrell III of Dover. His grain farm dates back to 1878.

• W. Gail Smith and her children, Lea Smith Carl and S. Rodmond Smith III. The family Farm, located in Middletown, was purchased in 1730 and currently produces small grains.

The six new Century Farm Award recipients bring the total number of farm families inducted into the program to 50.

For more information about the program or to begin paperwork to qualify your own farm for the Century Farm distinction, contact Cathy Mesick of the Department of Agriculture's aglands preservation section at (302) 739-4811.

Corn Growers Pay Attention To Sulphur Requirements

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Last year's disappointing corn harvest — 10 percent lower than 1990's, with an average per-acre yield of only 106 bushels — coupled with the world's low grain inventory and political uncertainty in eastern Europe should help strengthen corn prices for U.S. growers in 1992.

Extension agronomists urge corn growers to pay even more attention to soil fertility needs and avoid losses from yield-robbing nutrient deficiencies. Sulphur levels in particular may require more scrutiny.

Often called "the fourth major nutrient," sulphur is essential for the formation of protein and chlorophyll. In corn, a sulphur deficiency not only decreases yields but reduces a crop's ability to make efficient use of applied nitrogen fertilizer.

"Reduced nitrogen efficiency is a concern for all farmers, but it's especially important to corn growers because of the high rates of nitrogen they apply," said Don Messick, agronomist at The Sulphur Institute.

It wasn't always necessary for corn growers to make deliberate applications of sulphur. "Years ago, when farmers routinely applied such fertilizers as single superphosphate (0-20-0- 12S), they automatically applied sulphur to their soils — often without realizing it," said Dr. George Rehm, soil specialist at the University of Minnesota. "Today's high-analysis forms of nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium — popular materials such as urea, nitrogen solutions, triple superphosphate, DAP and muriate of potash — contain little or no sulphur."

Cleaner air has also increased the need for deliberate sulphur applications. According to the Environmental Protection Agency, sulphur dioxide emissions were reduced nearly 15 percent over the last decade and 28 percent since 1970. These sharp decreases are attributed to the Clean Air Act of 1970 and the burning of more low-sulphur western coal by industries and utilities. More recent legislation, which calls for a 10 million ton reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions by the year 2000, should intensify this trend.

"As we continue to clean up the air, we suspect that sulphur deficiencies will become even more of a problem, especially for our corn growers," said Dr. Bob Hoeft, extension agronomist at the University of Illinois.

Sulphur deficiencies are most common on soils that are low in organic matter or sandy and coarse in texture. "Our research through the years has verified a definite sulphur response on our lighter soils that are low in organic matter," said Dr. Daryl Buchholz, agronomist at the University of Missouri. "For that reason, we recommend growers apply sulphur in their fertilizer program on those soils before they actually see symptoms of sulphur deficiency."

But don't write off sulphur deficiency on heavier soils. "For many years, I think we've overestimated the amount of plant-available sulphur in finer textured soils," said Dr. Ray Reneau, soil specialist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. "In time, we'll see sulphur deficiency is more extensive on these soils than we had once thought."

Corn growers must also remember that sulphur, like nitrogen, is a highly mobile nutrient. That means excessive rainfall and irrigation can easily leach the nutrient out of the topsoil. "Last spring, when we had so much rain here, our soil samples showed a sulphur deficiency in the soil's surface," explains Missouri's Buchholz. "We suspect that sulphur remains in the clay subsoil, but the young plant's roots are not deep enough to reach that sulphur."

Dr. Regis Voss has made similar observations in Iowa. "A cool, wet spring will sometimes prevent young seedlings from obtaining enough sulphur," he explains. "In this situation, adding sulphur fertilizer to the corn starter fertilizer may be a good idea."

In some areas, corn producers routinely apply 10 to 20 pounds of sulphur per acre on sandy soils. But, cautions Dr. Leonard Parks, professor emeritus at Clemson University, "When growers apply sulphur fertilizer before planting, on sandy soils, if a lot of rain falls for a week or so, this sulphur will be leached out. That's why farmers might have to sidedress sulphur to ensure that no deficiencies occur."

Dr. Allan Bandel, agronomist at the University of Maryland, agrees. "We tell our corn growers to apply nitrogen and sulphur at the same time, as near as possible to the peak demand period. For farmers with coarse-textured soils, that means making split applications before or at planting, and after crop emergence."

Sulphur, which generally costs farmers 20-25 cents a pound, has proved to be a high-yielding investment. "With fertilizer, we're generally glad to get a $3 return on every dollar we put in," said Dr. Bill Segars, agronomist at the University of Georgia. "But in many cases with sulphur, it's not uncommon to get — and this is a conservative estimate — a $9 or $10 return, particularly on irrigated corn."

Said Missouri's Buchholz, "Adding sulphur is a relatively inexpensive proposition for farmers, and it makes sense to avoid the risk of a sulphur deficiency when the total investment doesn't cost that much."

Soil testing will provide a general indication of a corn crop's sulphur requirements, as long as samples are taken from 18-24 inches deep. An early-season plant analysis — when the crop is 6-8 inches tall — will help spot potential sulphur deficiencies before they reduce yield significantly. Growers should contact their local diagnostic lab for more details.

In cooperation with university agronomists, The Sulphur Institute has prepared a noncommercial, educational brochure that address sulphur requirements of corn. Good Nutrient Management Softens Effects Of Regulations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers who already have adopted sound nutrient management practices should have an easier time adapting to proposed state regulations, said a Penn State extension agronomist.

"Nutrient management legislation will be a major influence on future farming practices," said Dr. Douglas Beegle, associate professor of agronomy. "But such legislation should have a minimal impact on farmers who don't have excess on-farm nutrients and who already are doing a good job of managing soil fertility."

The first step in managing nutrients is to conduct regular soil tests. A standard soil test usually includes pH and lime requirements, potassium, phosphorus, magnesium, and calcium.

Beegle said fall is the best time to test soil, but farmers often are too busy harvesting to run tests then. "If you don't test in the fall, do it as early as possible in the spring to leave enough time before planting to evaluate the results," he said. "Always test at the same time each year so the results are consistent and you can identify trends."

Soil testing is particularly important following a drought. "Because yields were down last year, plants used a small amount of nutrients," Beegle said. "Testing now really can pay off by detecting high levels of residual fertility, which reduces the need to buy fertilizer."

Nitrogen also is essential for crop growth, and is especially important for corn. But nitrogen, unlike most other nutrients, is very mobile in the soil. From the time a standard soil test is run until peak plant growth — mid- to late June for corn — nitrogen may leach into groundwater or be lost to the atmosphere.

To allow for this possibility, farmers should conduct a presidedress nitrogen test (PSNT) just before the time of peak growth, when corn is about a foot tall. "Don't apply all your fertilizer at planting time," said Beegle. "Delay application of at least some nitrogen until just before peak growth, then sidedress as needed based on the results of the PSNT."

Beegle said there may be particularly high levels of residual nitrogen in the soil this spring because of last year's drought.

"On the other hand, if we have a wet spring, a lot of that residual nitrogen could be lost and the PSNT could help farmers apply the right amount of fertilizer or manure to optimize their yields."

Beegle and his colleagues in Penn State's agronomy department have evaluated the PSNT over three growing seasons. On 69 percent of farms tested in 1991, nitrogen recommendations based on PSNT results called for less fertilizer than farmers planned to apply. The average recommendation was 95 pounds less per acre, partly because of drier than normal conditions that reduced yields and nitrogen loss.

Twenty-one percent of 1991 recommendations called for no change in planned nitrogen applications. Higher application rates, averaging 61 pounds per acre, were indicated for 9 percent of farms tested.

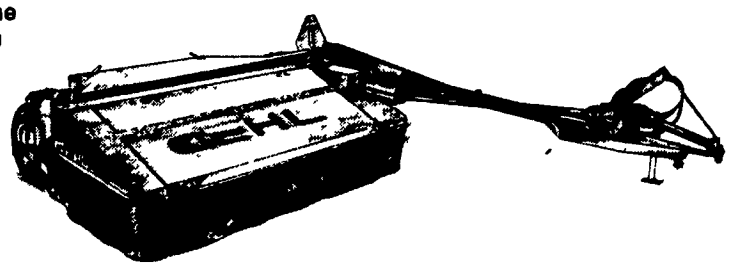
For more information on soil fertility and nutrient management, contact the Penn State cooperative extension office in your county.

GEHL

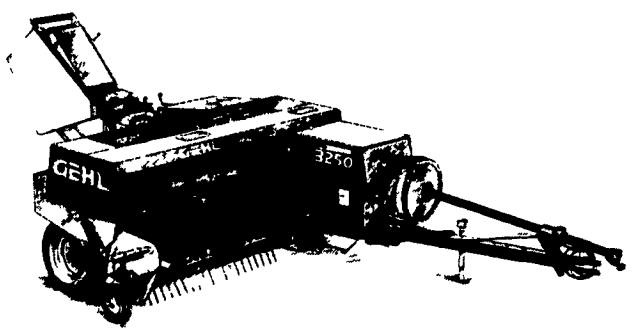
Gehl has two all-new disc mower conditioners to cut your crop down to size, fast and easy. The DC2340 has 7 discs and a 9-foot cutting width; the DC2360 has 8 discs and a 10½ -foot cutting width.

Cut Hay The Disc Way!

- High speed discs - Each disc has two knives to slice through the toughest crops and conditions; the disc gear drive operates in an oil bath for long life.
- Sturdy frame - Cradles the cutterbar for extra protection and durability.
- 540 or 1,000 rpm driveline with equal-angle hitch for smooth power transfer.
- Standard hydraulic tongue - Makes it easy to position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.



It's OK To Be Square!



Gehl thinks it's all right to be square -- when it comes to baling hay, that is. That's why we've introduced two new square balers to compliment our great line of round balers and other Gehl haytools. Both balers make standard 14x18-inch bales and offer these proven features:

- Dependable knotter - Has fewer parts for more reliability and stronger knots, tie after tie.
- Wide pickups - With close spaced tines, flared side sheets and standard gauge wheel, the pickup brings in all of the crop.
- Plunger system - self-aligning for reduced wear.
- Bale tension - Easily adjusted with two handles.
- Hydraulic bale thrower - Has a self-contained hydraulic system and electric controls on the tractor (optional).
- Big twine storage - Holds 6 bales of twine.

Gehl TMR Mixer Feeders Are #1

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action - Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes - From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities.
- Three Styles - Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

Market Ed Program Helps Improve Income

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The Adams County Farmers' Association in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association and The American Farm Bureau Federation have developed market education workshops called "Market Master."

The Market Master program is a comprehensive market education curriculum geared to the needs of those who want to increase net farm income. Wise buying and selling decisions have a greater effect on net farm income than does simply increasing production. Hundreds of articles, dozens of books, and input from professional commodities analysts have been reviewed to gather material for the series.

According to ACFA's Farm Management Agent, Gary Gillespie of York Springs, "Market Master offers three workshops: cash buying and selling, hedging in the cash and futures markets, and fundamental and technical analysis. Each course in the series serves as a foundation for the next course. Although each course can stand alone, the series was designed to build upon the skills learned and practiced at each preceding level."

These workshops will teach the nuts and bolts of cash marketing and provide a strong foundation for future workshops.

Those attending the workshops will learn such skills as:

- Determining fair market price.
- Analyzing the costs and benefits of marketing alternatives.
- Planning cash flow.
- Using cash price and basis to decide where, when and how to sell or buy.

The workshops teach the advantages and disadvantages of hedging alternatives for buying and selling. The last course in the series will teach:

- Using futures market alternatives to protect your profit margin.
- Using basis and option contracts.
- Preparing a written marketing plan using both cash and futures markets.

"Sixty percent of the farm families that take these workshop series say they are now 'better off financially," said FMBAS Agent Gillespie. "Seventy percent of the farm families say the workshops helped them market their production and ninety percent would recommend the series to their friends."

For additional information, contact FMBAS for the Adams County Farmers' Association, Gary Gillespie, (717) 528-8141.

Bulletin Helps In Forage Management

ITHACA, N.Y. — Forage crops — legumes, grasses, and corn silage — form the basis of the nutritional programs on dairy, beef, and sheep farms.

From the moment that crops are cut until they are delivered to animals, biological processes take place that decrease their quantity and nutritional quality as feeds.

"Silage and Hay Preservation" (NRAES-5) provides a wealth of practical information and scientific background on managing forage preservation to reduce losses and quality changes.

Proper management results in more efficient production and greater farm profits.

The 53-page bulletin, written by R. E. Pit. of the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering at Cornell University and reviewed by experts from across the country, is divided into three sections: "The Biology of Silage Preservation," "Preservation of Hay," and "Additives for Silage and Hay Preservation." In the first two sections, the processes that affect forage quality are described, and management practices to control these processes are discussed. The additives section describes their impact on forage preservation and includes a frank assessment of the usefulness of eight categories of additives.

"Silage and Hay Preservation" (NRAES-5) is available for $6 from the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service (NRAES), 152 Riley Robb Hall, Cooperative Extension, Ithaca, NY 14853. Postage and handling are included for U. S. orders only; orders from outside the U. S. must be prepaid in U. S. funds. Please make your check payable to NRAES or call (607) 255-7654 for more information.

ORDER YOUR NEW SILO WITH A FIBERDOME CHUTE OR REPLACE YOUR OLD WORN OUT CHUTE

fiberdome SILO CHUTE

made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7½' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2½" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

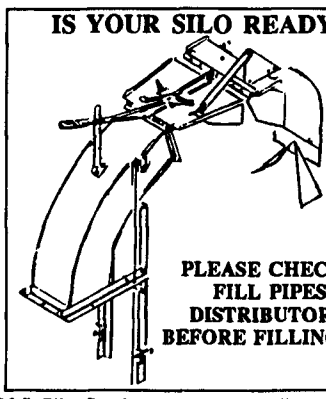
IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

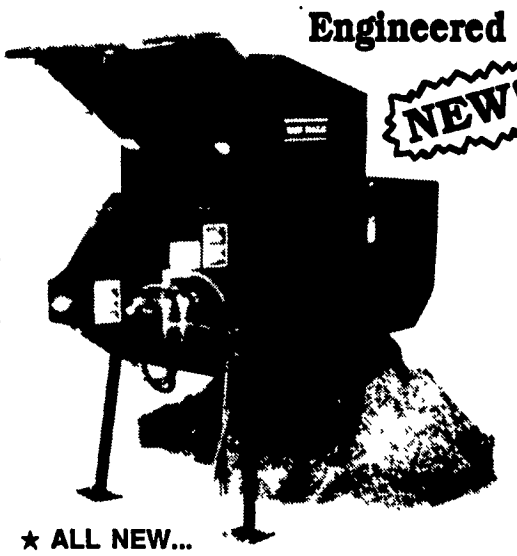
VAN DALE® Dependability through Quality

S600 BALE PROCESSOR

Engineered & Designed By Van Dale...



NEW!

ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND ON THE MARKET TODAY!

BALED HAY CAN NOW BE MIXED
Baled hay can now be processed into a condition suitable for mixing with other TMR materials in all types of mixers: auger, tumble or reel type. With the Van Dale Bale Processor, you can incorporate baled hay into your ration with less stress on your mixer and be assured of getting the maximum benefit from both your hay and your mixer.

ELIMINATES THE DUST AND MESS
The Van Dale Bale Processor uses a hydraulic ram to push the hay bale through a set of hardened steel knives slicing it into a more mixable 4" to 6" average length material without pulverizing the fragile materials in the bale.

FEED THE LEAVES-NOT JUST STEMS
Don't let your valuable feed nutrients disappear in a cloud of dust. Unlike a conventional bale chopper or tub grinder with high speed cutting knives which turn leaves into powder, the Van Dale Bale Processor retains up to 97% of the valuable leaf portion of your hay to be incorporated into the TMR ration.

Measure The Performance

Dale Baker and Family, RD New Enterprise, PA

"Since December 1990 our herd average has increased from 17,600 to 21,504 lbs. of milk. The majority of this increase can be traced to two factors:

First, Rob Hinton, our Purina Dairy Specialist. Rob is always available to adjust our ration.

Second, a TMR mixer that stopped our cows from separating grain and forages allowing us to realize more benefit from our Purina Maxi-Tech 32 FF.

Last summer we had a 5-year old peak at 149 lbs. of milk and hold over 100 lbs. for four months as well as a 2-year old finish with a 29,100 lb. record in 317 days. In addition, our butterfat has held at 3.8% over the past year."

60 Cows

Feeds one group TMR (60#) consisting of haylage, c. silage, dry hay, dry shelled corn, dry ear corn, oats, and Purina Maxi-Tech 32 FF. Topdresses high cows in a stall barn with dry shelled corn 24 and Maxi-Tech 32FF, Purina Grain stretcher.

Jerry, Little Al and Allen, RD 4 Bedford, PA

Allen Claar, along with his daughter Lisa, son-in-law Jerry Yarnell and grandson little Al started with Purina and the Bedford Farm Bureau in June 1990. "At that time our RHA was 17,687. Today we are at 20,741. Since starting on Purina we have had poor forages and have made changes in how we feed and house the cows, but we have never dropped in production.

Rob Hinton, Purina's local dairy specialist is in here every 2 weeks checking forages and staying on top of any changes. Rob is aware of the constant care and time a dairy farm needs to maintain high production goals.

Our high group which is 3/4 of the herd has been averaging between 85 and 90 lbs. Our current tank average is running over 75 lbs/cow."

80 Cows

High Group (80#) Low Group (60#)

Feeds haylage, c. silage, dry hay, high moisture shell corn, Purina Maxi-Tech 32 FF, and whole cottonseed.
